MACAPA, Brazil (AP)—Brazilian authorities hoisted their green and yellow flag in token of custody over the hijacked Venezuelan freighter Anzoategui in the muddy Amazon River here Wednesday and politely interned nine Venezuelan terrorists who seized the ship at sea.

The future of the disarmed pro-Communist band was uncertain. The ship will be returned to Venezuela. The hijackers were transferred

School Bus Accident Costs Child Both Legs

WATERLOO, N.Y. (AP)—Debbie Marcucci complained that her pajama bottoms were too tight and asked, "Is part of my leg gone?"

Her parents' affirmative reply brought a few tears from the pretty 7-year-old brunette who, at the moment, had not been told she also was minus her other leg.

Debbie lost much of her right leg last Wednesday in a school bus-tractor trailer collision. Doctors were unable to save the left leg and amputated it below the knee Monday.

Orazio Marcucci, 33, Debbie's unemployed father, said that Debbie complained about the pajamas being too tight after she had been placed in a wheel chair Tuesday.

When he and his wife, Sylvia, 29, told Debbie one leg was gone, she started whimpering, forgot about it and went to sleep, he said.

"Later on we told her both legs were gone," he said.

Debbie asked, "What am I going to do? How will I walk?"

Marcucci, who also has three sons, said Debbie was told she would be taken to Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester and outfitted with artificial limbs.

"She took it good. She was happy about it," he said.

Debbie had been reported in critical condition but Wednesday officials at Taylor-Brown Memorial Hospital in this central New York village said her condition was satisfactory.

Marcucci said Debbie's greatest enjoyment was dancing. She had taken dancing lessons every week since she was 3 years old.

AFL-CIO Leaders Ask Ballot Check

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—AFL-CIO leaders decided Wednesday to establish a nationwide system of voting overseers charged with insuring the greatest possible union member turnout at the polls in the 1964 elections.

The union chiefs approved a plan to name an agent or committee in each of the nation's approximately 60,000 affiliated local unions to conduct a continuing drive to make sure that union members, their wives, and adult children are registered and vote.

The decision was reached at an administrative meeting of the AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education — COPE, the federation's political action organization. It was stated that COPE operations ahead of the 1960 and 1962 elections were so successful they will be expanded on a permanent basis.

Brother of UAW Chief

"We believe our work in getting our people registered, followed up by our get-out-the-vote efforts, was decisive in many close elections throughout the nation," said Roy Reuther, director of the 1962 drive. He is a brother of President Walter P. Reuther of the United Auto Workers Union.

A spokesman said the AFL-CIO will campaign to change what he called restrictive and archaic registration laws effective in many states limiting registration opportunity only to daytime hours and hard-to-reach locations.

The spokesman complained that a proposal to permit official door-to-door registration had been met in Wisconsin with newspaper editorial opposition questioning whether it was wise to sacrifice quality for quantity in voter registration.

Bill Poll Taxes

A major AFL-CIO objective in 1963 is to get sufficient states to ratify a pending constitutional amendment to outlaw poll taxes. The spokesman said election participation is lowest in poll tax states, only 25.5 per cent of voting age population in 1960 in Mississippi and 30.3 per cent in Alabama.

Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO Communications Workers Union announced plans to go the limit to win pension improvements for some 400,000 telephone industry workers employed by the Bell System headed by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Other union objectives, besides higher wages and new medical insurance coverage, may include a six-month paid "sabbatical" every five years for 15-year employees, a plan aimed at helping create more phone industry jobs.

JFK Message On Elderly Due Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy will send Congress a special message Thursday on the problems of elderly people, but last-minute decisions still were being made Wednesday on a new health care bill he hopes will appeal to Congress.

The President's advisers have been conferring early and late on details of a plan to provide health care for the aged under the Social Security system.

They hope to have a measure ready for introduction right after Kennedy's message has been read Thursday noon, but from that moment on the bill's progress is bound to be slow, tortuous and uncertain.

One of the chief problems awaiting final decision was whether to include an optional provision for private health insurance.

Such a feature was added to last year's unsuccessful bill in a compromise bid for Republican support, but administration officials were reported veering away from it this year.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., who again will be the chief Senate sponsor of the administration bill, plans to round up numerous cosponsors. He says he believes the bill will pass the Senate this time.

Democratic congressional leaders look for the big fight to be made in the House.

Last year, the legislation was bottled up in the House Ways and Means Committee, although extensive hearings were held.

Anderson and Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., worked out a compromise Senate version, but its backers were defeated 52-48 in an effort to attach it to a House-passed public welfare bill.

Two new Democrats expected to support the Kennedy bill have been added to the Ways and Means Committee this year but even so the measure is likely to face a tough battle there unless it receives the active support of Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas.

Compromise Offered On Inspections

GENEVA (AP)—The U.S. government guardedly offered Wednesday to reduce its demand for eight on-site inspections in the Soviet Union if other arrangements in a treaty for a nuclear test ban are made foolproof.

William C. Foster, chief U.S. disarmament negotiator, carefully edged this proposal forward in the 17-nation disarmament conference in an effort to break the East-West deadlock.

He tried to draw a response from the Soviet side. But the Russians, who probably lacked instructions from Moscow, ignored the suggestion.

Instead Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov tried to shift the attention of the conference to cold war questions by exhuming a post-Moscow project, a nonaggression pact between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Warsaw Pact.

Later at a luncheon, Kuznetsov discussed the test ban problem with the leading negotiators for the West.

to the Brazilian corvette Solimoes for a 200-mile voyage to Belém where they will be treated as guests of Brazil until courts and diplomats settle their future.

Venezuela wants them returned to face trials and possible 10- to 15-year prison sentences. Brazil considers them political oppositionists who might qualify for asylum. Final decisions may rest with the Brazilian Supreme Court.

Eight-Day Chase

Transfer of the hijackers to the corvette marked the end of the freighter's eight-day role as a floating stage for the terrorists.

They had sought to dramatize the vessel's seizure their way against the government of President Romulo Betancourt, who is visiting the United States as the guest of President Kennedy.

Brazilian officials said the original 35-man crew of the freighter will remain in Macapa for the time being. Two Venezuelan navy officers are en route to take over the vessel. Presumably, the crew will sail it home.

Brazilian forces took over the vessel Tuesday and disarmed the mutineers. Pilots sailed her to Macapa.

She churned into the Amazon, sailed past Macapa and finally halted Tuesday night about 15 miles farther upstream, off Santana, a manganese port. She dropped back to Macapa Wednesday morning with Brazilian diplomatic and military personnel aboard. Her hijackers were reported disarmed and in detention.

Hijackers Held

The hijackers will be held at Belém pending the decision on their future. The navy says they will be interned but treated as guests of Brazil.

Their leader has been identified as Wismar Medina Rojas, the Anzoategui's second mate. His band consists of seven students and one office worker. They have identified themselves as members of the Armed Forces for National Liberation (FALN), an organization that swears allegiance to Fidel Castro's Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Brazilian Adm. Osmar de Azeredo Rodriguez said he had received word that the Anzoategui's skipper, Oscar Pereira, and the rest of his 35-man crew were unharmed and in good health.

Azeredo Rodriguez reported no information to bear out previous reports that several members of the crew had joined the terrorists.

The Anzoategui was en route to the United States when the terrorists took command.

Governor To Seek More State Defense Contracts

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Scranton promised Wednesday to appeal directly to the President, if necessary, to get Pennsylvania a bigger share of national defense contracts.

The governor told his weekly news conference that Pennsylvania gets only 3.7 per cent of the defense and development contracts, despite its position as the third-ranking state.

He said he is "very disappointed" in the state's showing. Asked if he would seek a meeting with President Kennedy in an effort to boost the Commonwealth's share of defense contracts, the governor said:

"I will if it (the state's share) doesn't get any better."

The purpose of establishing the office of governor's representative in Washington was to secure the state a greater share of federal spending as a means of promoting jobs, Scranton said.

The chief executive said his office here and his representative in Washington, James E. Van Zandt, are at work now to retain a number of jobs currently located at the Olmsted Air Force Base at nearby Middletown.

Two Considerations

However, the governor added, there are two overriding considerations that should rule defense contract allocations: What's good for national security; where the job "can be done cheapest and best."

In other developments:

Bingo — The governor said his administration does not plan to present any legislation to legalize bingo. Last week Scranton said he saw nothing wrong with bingo—a form of gambling—as long as it was played for charitable purposes.

Traffic Safety—Talks will begin next week, the governor said, toward development of a highway safety plan. In the meantime, he said, he would make no comment.

Republican Convention — The governor said he has asked for a hearing before the Republican National Committee's Convention Site Committee to make a plea to have the 1964 GOP presidential convention in Philadelphia.

Strip Mining

Strip Mining—The governor said his administration plans to go "right ahead with our original plan" for strip mine legislation in the bituminous areas.

Several legislators have introduced plans of their own, which include some of the features sought by the administration, but none has won the approval of the administration, the governor indicated.

Commissions — The governor said he has not made any decisions on the choice of new commissioners to either the milk or harness racing commissions.

Industrial Development—An address on industrial development will be made to the legislature March 5.

HELD IN SLAYINGS—Harry Hebard, 16, is flanked by detectives Bob Basche, left, and Norman Daniels as he heads for Brown County jail after questioning in Green Bay, Wis., about the slayings of five members of his family. District Attorney Robert Warren said he admitted the slayings. (AP Wirephoto)

Cuban Exile Leader Calls For Invasion

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Cuban exile leader said Wednesday there definitely are more than 17,000 Soviet troops in Cuba and perhaps up to 30,000. He called for a U.S.-led invasion "to restore peace to the hemisphere."

Dr. Manuel deVarona, who was president of the Cuban Senate from 1950 to 1952 under ousted President Fulgencio Batista, also said:

"Well-informed sources in Vietnam" report the Soviets have established two secret military bases in Latin America. One in the jungles of northwest Brazil, the other in the mountains of Paraguay.

—Cuba has set up numerous schools of sabotage and guerrilla warfare throughout Latin America, directed by a council of high Communist officials in Havana.

DeVarona, speaking through an interpreter, Dr. Nestor Carbonell, made his statements in testimony before the House Inter-American Affairs subcommittee. It is investigating Cuban subversion in Latin America.

DeVarona said he had evidence and reports of 30,000 to 35,000 Soviet troops remaining. But under questioning by Rep. Leonard Farber, D-N.Y., DeVarona changed this, saying he would make the definite statement there are more than 17,000 and as many as 30,000.

Russians Everywhere

"The Russians are seen everywhere, in the cities, in the country, at concentration camps," he said, quoting refugee sources.

He said there were 5,000 Russian troops in his province of Camaguey alone. His sources, he said, had not reported any use of Soviet troops "as yet" to put down uprisings of Cuban people.

DeVarona gave few details about the reported Soviet bases in Brazil and Paraguay, or what kind of bases they are other than military.

Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Calif., said he assumed the countries involved would be aware of this and, "I would think the establishment of a military base on someone else's territory would be an act of war."

DeVarona didn't elaborate on his report of the Cuban schools for sabotage and guerrilla warfare.

But he did say the regime of Fidel Castro, Cuban prime minister, cannot be overthrown by the "so-called policy of isolation—which only isolates the captive people of Cuba from its allies."

And he in part defended the former Batista government. He said Castro was able to overthrow it not because there was any widespread poverty or injustice then, but because of corruption and the fact it was a dictatorship.

DeVarona voiced doubt that a social and economic revolution in Latin America, like the United States is attempting to stimulate through the alliance for progress, would halt Castro-type subversion.

Social progress cannot be attained in Latin America if communism is allowed to remain in Cuba, he said.

Carbonell read a deVarona statement saying, "Only joint military action from abroad, under the leadership of the United States, can liberate Cuba and restore peace to the hemisphere."

In a supplement read later, however, he called first for a naval and air blockade, then adequate military assistance for freedom fighters in Cuba's mountains and abroad, and finally "collective armed action" against Cuba if needed.

Such action should be taken through the Organization of American States, deVarona said, but by the United States alone, if necessary, under its inherent right of unilateral self-defense.

DeVarona disputed administration contentions that only 17,000 Soviet troops remain in Cuba of those sent there before the United States forced out Soviet offensive missiles and bombers last October.

The White House said it had no comment on his testimony.

At first deVarona said he had evidence and reports of 30,000 to 35,000 Soviet troops remaining. But under questioning by Rep. Leonard Farber, D-N.Y., DeVarona changed this, saying he would make the definite statement there are more than 17,000 and as many as 30,000.

Debris Gives Indication On Missing Ship's Fate

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Flotswan lettered "Sulphur Queen" was found Wednesday by vessels searching for the missing freighter Marine Sulphur Queen.

Also found, according to a radio message monitored by The Associated Press at Key West, were six "exploder mechanisms." The Coast Guard at Miami, directing the search, said it knew nothing of this and suspected the reference to the mechanisms was a Navy message about an operation entirely unrelated to the search for the Marine Sulphur Queen.

Coast Guard search and rescue headquarters said a search vessel was expected to reach Miami early Thursday with a life jacket, a metal oil can, and a 4x2-foot piece of metal oil lettered "Sulphur Queen," a fog megaphone and some bits of wood.

The debris was viewed as an indication that some mishap befell the 523-foot tanker with 39 men aboard.

Search For Survivors

An intensive search was launched for any possible survivors.

The tanker left Beaumont, Tex., Feb. 2 on a run to Norfolk, Va., carrying 15,000 tons of molten sulphur. At 8:25 p.m. the following day, a crewman sent a personal message giving her position as 230 miles southeast of New Orleans, La.

She was never heard from again, although she carried two high frequency radio transmissions with emergency batteries and also had a radiotelephone.

Until now, no debris, oil slick or other evidence of a tragedy had been found. Search planes flew more than 500 hours over the Gulf and Atlantic and the Coast Guard said, "We are undoubtedly looking for the remains of a sea disaster."

Air-Sea Action

A Coast Guard vessel and a Navy destroyer escort, the Peterson, sped toward the area where the debris was found. A Coast Guard plane already in the air on a routine flight was diverted to start the aerial search.

The Marine Sulphur Queen's cargo was not considered dangerous. The vessel itself had recently passed inspections by the Coast Guard.

Capt. J. V. Fanning of Beaumont, a sailor of 30 years experience, was the master of the crew which included men from 14 states.

Merchant ships do not report regularly and no concern was felt for the tanker until Feb. 7, when an all-ships broadcast was made seeking word on her location. There was some fear that she might have drifted into Cuban waters.

Jury Deliberates Slaying Of Youth

BAXLEY, Ga. (AP)—A Superior Court jury failed to reach a verdict Wednesday night on the fate of a 33-year-old truck driver charged with murder in the knife slaying of a Pennsylvania college student last December.

The 12 white men were locked up for the night and told to resume their deliberations at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

Wilton Edwards, father of five children, pleaded in an unworn statement for the jury to let him go home to his wife and children.

Describing the highway incident of Dec. 29, he said Nicholas Matthews Cascario, 19, and Dan Fiorot, 22, both of Bangor, Pa., attacked him following a car-bumping fray.

Cascario was stabbed fatally. He and Fiorot, students at Penn State, were returning from a vacation trip to Florida.

Fiorot testified that Cascario was stabbed after their car was bumped off the highway and Cascario went toward the aggressor car.

Fiorot said the last thing he heard Cascario say, was "hey, buddy . . ."

Edwards said he got out of the car and the students beat him and kicked him, knocking him down.

"I did not know anyone had been cut. I honestly cannot tell you if I cut anyone," he said. "It happened so fast."

Addressing the jury in a tense voice, Edwards leaned forward and said:

"You judge me just as I would judge you. I want you to let me go home to my wife and babies, to live out my life in Apppling County as a free man."

The younger Edwards told much the same story as related by his uncle. He also has been indicted for murder and faces trial following that of his uncle.

Bill For Strict Control Of Strip Mining Is Scheduled

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Scranton said Wednesday his administration plans to present a strong bituminous strip mining control bill to the legislature whatever the results of his flying inspection tour Thursday.

"If they're going to try to brainwash me, I think they'll have a very hard time," Scranton told his weekly news conference, in reference to the trip through the central and western Pennsylvania strip mining areas.

He did not identify "they," nor did the question as to the possibility of any brainwashing being done refer to any of the issue.

A representative from each of the conservation groups and the strip mine operators will accompany the governor on each phase of the tour.

The governor first will see sections of Clearfield County, then of Butler-Clarion-Venango counties, ending with a tour of Washington-Allegheny counties.

Scranton said Mines Secretary H. Beecher Chambers looked at some of the territory over the weekend and advised him that snow conditions would not impair the purpose of the trip.

Flying Schedule

Scranton's schedule called for him to fly in the state plane to mid-state airport (8:30 a.m.) at Philipsburg, then tour by helicopter for two hours (9:30-11:30 a.m.) after a 45-minute open meeting with interested groups at Clearfield.

The next stop on the schedule was Butler (12:30 p.m.), another open meeting (12:40-1:30 p.m.), and a 90-minute helicopter flight (1:30-3 p.m.) ranging as far north as Franklin, Venango County.

The tour ends with an open meeting at the Greater Pittsburgh Airport (3:30-4:15 p.m.), and a 75-minute flight (4:15-5:30 p.m.) over strip mine operations in Washington and Allegheny counties.

Except for a visit to a conservation project area run by the strip mine operators in Clearfield County, the official party will be airborne throughout the inspection tours, under present plans.

The Mines Department chartered a seven-passenger helicopter for the tour.

First-Hand View

Chambers planned the trip to give the governor a first-hand view of the stripped areas as a guide to a final draft.

Conservation groups, which at first endorsed the inspection trip, since have expressed the opinion that snow cover would prevent a clear picture of what they consider to be the scenic destruction and stream pollution associated with strip mining.

The operators have applauded the governor's decision to visit the mining areas. They consider present laws, including the new controls added by the 1961 legislature, already are the toughest in the country, that they are sufficient to protect the public's interest and that the operators are complying with regulations.

The Clearfield County conservation project, a combined effort of the Independent Mineral Producers Association and the Central Pennsylvania Open Pit Mining Association, was conceived as a demonstration.

The project shows stripping underway and land that has been reclaimed after strip operations were completed.

Glenn Presents Friendship 7 To Smithsonian Institute

WASHINGTON (AP)—Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. helped present his famous space capsule to the Smithsonian Institution and disclosed that his teenage son and daughter were the ones who picked the name "Friendship 7" for it.

The simple ceremony Wednesday was held exactly a year after the freed, red-haired Marine lieutenant colonel became the first American to orbit the earth. Among the 400 or so jammed into the museum were Glenn's wife, Annie, their two children and his parents.

Dr. Hugh Dryden, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, made the formal presentation. Along with the capsule went Glenn's space suit and the small American flag that the astronaut carried on his three-orbit journey.

It was appropriate, Dryden told the gathering, that the ceremony was being held under the wings of the craft in which Orville and Wilbur Wright made man's first powered flight.

Pointing up the contrast — the Wright plane's speed was 30 miles an hour and Friendship 7 was 17,500 miles an hour — Dryden said this is a constant reminder that mankind aspires to the stars.

Yet, in a sense, Dryden said, Glenn's flight was "his faltering and feeble step" as that 1903 Wright flight because progress marches so fast.

Within a year of Glenn's achievement, he said, plans were well advanced for the two-man Gemini space capsules and the Apollo three-man craft that will take astronauts to the moon.

"We know that exploration of the moon will not be the final endeavor," Dryden said.

"Although the means lie outside the boundaries of our present technological tools, we will find our way to the farthest reaches of the solar system."

Glenn, speaking briefly, related that in the early days of the space program, NASA let the astronauts pick the names for their space capsules. Conscious of the international publicity that would be involved, he said, the astronauts boiled down suggested names to the few that could be considered best to serve the national interest.

When it came time for him to pick a name, Glenn said—looking at his children, David, 17, and Lyn, 15—he decided to leave the choice to them.

The name was an expression of the desire that space be used for peaceful purposes, Glenn said.

"Let us hope that in space there will be not hate, greed, injustice, or all the things that seem to saddle us here on earth," Glenn said.

"We hope we can dedicate ourselves to this peaceful motive not only in the future of space but through the peaceful uses of space."

The mementoes of Glenn's flight will join other historic relics in the museum.

"Wonderful relics of flight history," Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., said in accepting them for the museum.

Anderson, who is regent of the Smithsonian, praised Glenn's "courage, daring and skill." And he said the astronaut's "conduct since—in the bright glare of inevitable publicity—has been an example and inspiration to all of us."

Among guests presented to the gathering were Atty. Gen. and Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy and ambassadors of nations that took part in tracking Friendship 7.

Boy Kills 5 In His Family

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Five members of a Green Bay family were found shot to death in their West Side home yesterday. The lone survivor, a 16-year-old high school boy, told Dist. Atty. Robert Warren he had killed them because he "had a general feeling of being left out of the family circle."

The victims were Jack Hebard, 38, a North Central Air Line freight foreman and part-time stunt driver; his wife Joyce, 35; and her three children by a previous marriage: John Rudell 15; and Judy and Janice, 11, twins.

He operates a used auto parts, business and welding supply business and has two children, Kathy Dell, 12, and Dale Edward, 10.

Labor Calls For Jobless Measures

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Organized labor's high command said yesterday the prospect of mounting unemployment requires sterner measures from President Kennedy's administration to combat it and alert the public to its dangers.

Members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council indicated after a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz that Kennedy's tax cut program falls short of what they feel is required to stimulate a lagging economy. The council called for an expanded unemployment pay program.

February Month Of Distant, Short Numbers

By JEF COX
Daily Record Reporter

THE most reliable clock that the average person possesses — the calendar — runs slow.

This is February, the month that usually has 28 days but sometimes has 29, and if you wait long enough, will have 30.

With all the advances of science, no calendar has been devised that will give an accurate year. Our present Gregorian calendar runs approximately one-fourth of a day slow every year.

The struggle to devise a correct calendar began with the earliest peoples, and the problem hasn't been solved as yet.

Gradually Departed

The Romans had a poor calendar which gradually departed 67 days from solar time — a state of affairs which induced Julius Caesar to introduce his reform.

He did so by inserting an intercalary day every fourth year — thus the origin of Feb. 29, or leap year.

Leap year comes every four years, making up for the quarter of a day that the calendar runs slow — but this extra day makes the calendar just a little bit fast.

The error in the length of the year would have occurred at the rate of a little more than three days every 400 years. So three of every four centesimal years (century years ending in 00) were made common years, not leap years. Thus, 1600 was a leap year, 1700 was not. Leap years are those divisible by four except centesimal years, which are common unless divisible by four. With all this, the calendar was still not accurate.

Not Synchronized

The trouble stems from the fact that the moon and sun are not synchronized. If one is to devise a perfect calendar, the phases of the moon must divide evenly into the revolutions of the earth around the sun.

This is not the case. The actual length of the year is 365 days, six hours, nine minutes, and 9.539 seconds. The length of a month is 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes and 2.8 seconds.

Thus the Roman calendar, by the time of the middle ages, was way out of whack. Pope Gregory decided to right this, and dropped two weeks out of August, 1585.

This corrected the calendar, but threw the dating system of history out of kilter. Besides, riots broke out across Europe, with people and merchants screaming, "Give us back our two weeks."

Instead of basing their numerical system on 100, as we do, theirs was based on the number 260. The Mayan year had 18 months of 20 days, to which were added five unlucky days. By sidereal insertion of intercalary days, their calendar was the most advanced, if not the least cumbersome, of any ever devised.

Fifty-two years constituted a century, and 73 centuries constituted the Mayan millennium. They so grew to love their remarkable

School Head Seeks Okay To Paddle Troublemakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supt. Carl F. Hansen asked permission Wednesday to paddle young troublemakers in public schools of the nation's capital if they refuse to behave themselves.

If corporal punishment and other methods fail, Hansen asked authority to expel the incorrigibles from school, even though they may be under 16.

Hansen requested the District of Columbia Board of Education to repeal its ban on corporal punishment and permit dismissal of youths under 16 where their presence in class interferes with the education of other pupils.

He said teachers generally do not want to paddle kids but it is clear that the present immunity from physical punishment encourages insolence on the part of some children.

To provide for those who are expelled, Hansen asked the board to establish 25 new teaching positions for social adjustment and late afternoon and evening classes for uncontrollable students.

The recommendations were in a report on the proposals of a special citizens committee which investigated a riot at a Thanksgiving Day city championship football game.

The special committee, headed by Dr. Shane McCarthy, former head of ex-President Dwight D. Eisenhower's Council on Youth Fitness, cited overcrowding in Washington schools, a lack of control over hoodlum elements, and an extreme disciplinary problem.

McCarthy said the school system had been swamped in recent years by "the rapid growth in numbers of Negro pupils, many with low mental ratings, coupled with increasing crowding of facilities."

Negroes make up more than 75 per cent of the pupils in Washington's public schools.

Hansen challenged the committee's description of "an atmosphere of lawlessness" in the public schools. He said many teachers are doing a good job despite disciplinary problems.

Don't Sell U.S. Short

SECRETARY of the Interior Udall lays heavy stress on the progress of Russia's electric power projects, and says we must keep ahead of the Soviets in the energy field. Mr. Udall has quoted the Soviet minister of power stations as saying that they hope to overtake us in the energy race during the 1970-80 period.

The Associated Press quotes Mr. Udall as adding, "This is the challenge which I have termed 'the energy race' and it entails much more than mere generation and consumption of electric energy. It entails the ability of our nation to maintain an economic system that can compete effectively not only with the Communist-bloc countries but also with the reinvigorated economies of the Western world."

It is certainly essential to watch Soviet developments in the field of energy output. But it can serve no good purpose if, while doing this, we underestimate and minimize our own achievements.

Energy output in this country, measured by per capita consumption or any other reasonable barometer, is far ahead of that of the Soviet Union. Also, according to the leading authorities of the world, we are far ahead in the complex research and experiment concerned with how we can most economically and efficiently produce energy from nuclear sources.

It is understandable that Russia's energy growth, measured on a percentage basis, will exceed ours at present for Russia started from a very low base. When you start from virtually nowhere to go somewhere the percentage rate of progress can be enormous—and also, enormously misleading.

In this connection a statement by D. S. Kennedy, in an Edison Electric Institute Bulletin published in early 1960, is significant. He wrote, "In any country electricity is produced to meet the demands for it . . . Building power capacity in excess of actual needs will not of itself, increase the total production of an economic system."

"Indeed, this may be wasteful of capital and materials that might be better used in other segments of the economy."

Don't sell this country short while recognizing Russia's progress.

Opinions Of Other Editors

One-Way Competition

THE COAL industry has been having its troubles for a long time, what with ever-rising wage rates and ever-growing competition from oil, gas and other power sources. So the industry has been alert to ideas that might allow it to remain competitive, and has opposed efforts to limit such things as coal slurry pipelines.

But it seems that the coal men, unfortunately, interpret free competition the same way too many other people do. To them it seems to mean freedom to compete with everyone else and protection from competition provided by others.

It's pretty hard to draw any other conclusion from the industry's anguished complaints about a recommendation of the White House Office of Emergency Planning. Edward A. McDermott, director of the OEP, urges a "meaningful relaxation" of controls on the inflow of foreign residual fuel oil, used mainly for firing boilers in industry and heating apartment houses and public buildings.

The domestic oil industry's production of this type of oil has been diminishing, as new refining methods have enabled producers to get increased quantities of higher-grade petroleum products from each gallon of crude oil. This has helped expand demand for imported fuel oil, especially for utilities along the East Coast, but Mr. McDermott's vague proposal is that it doesn't go nearly far enough. Import curbs, of whatever kind, waste the nation's resources and distort its economy. But despite the OEP's cautious approach, the coal men contend its plan shows that "apparently the continuance of a healthy domestic coal industry is not very meaningful as far as Mr. McDermott is concerned."

They ought to know from their own experience that the continuance of a healthy industry depends most of all on the continuance of free and healthy competition.

The Most Out Of School

There is a great controversy brewing in educational circles these days about "breaking the grade barriers." Dr. Harry Anderson, a director of undergraduate studies in the School of Education of Boston University, has just issued a call for letting exceptional children move ahead of their more sluggish contemporaries at their own pace studying such things as algebra and geometry in the early grades and otherwise "developing potential to the utmost."

On the other hand, Dr. Frances Ilg of the Gesell Institute considers that practically all children tend to be pushed ahead too fast. "Overplacement," she says, "is far more frequent than underachievement."

I've listened to both Dr. Anderson and Dr. Ilg and have noticed that both of them can support their contentions with statistics and case histories. When Dr. Ilg says that even "gifted" children, if forced to associate with those older than themselves, can encounter baffling emotional problems, I can believe that she is right.

But what if all children, the "gifted" and the backward alike, were to be given successful instruction in reading and writing in kindergarten and pre-kindergarten years? They would then be in a position later on to move rapidly ahead as class units without worries about "breaking barriers" or being "over" or "under" placed.

I don't think I am being foolish in making this suggestion, for I have been keeping tabs for three years now on an experiment being conducted by Dr. Omar Khayyam Moore, a Yale sociologist, at the Hamden Hall Country Day School in Connecticut.

Beginning with his own daughter Venn when she was 3 years old, Dr. Moore has been putting kindergarten and pre-kindergarten youngsters into quiet little booths where they have been allowed to play unhindered with electric typewriters. When I first watched 3-year-olds and 4-year-olds pecking at keyboards back in 1961, the tests were interesting.

The kids quickly got on to the fact that the marvelous electric "toy" in front of them had some purpose — and Dr. Moore and his staff were ready to slip into a booth and give a curious child a lift towards spelling simple words like "cat" and "dog."

A year later I went back. The class of twenty had become a class of forty-five. The twenty pre-kindergartners of the year before with nine school months behind them, were really rattling off meaningful sentences, doing first and second grade work at ages of 4 and 5. There was one pert youngster, Lisa W., who if she had been in the kindergarten in any ordinary school would have still been playing with blocks.

Lisa was operating her electric typewriter with an "LQ" system. With the typewriter keys painted red, green, white and purple, and with her finger-nails decorated with matching colors, Lisa played a "game" of hitting the keys color for color.

I watched her during her first session of copying out of a book without looking at the keyboard as she typed. She made very few mistakes — although she confessed to her teacher that "some times I have to look at the keys." Then she read her "story" back to the teacher.

Just the other day I returned to watch Dr. Moore's pupils for a third annual checkup. The bright "I. Q.'s" were making phenomenal progress. Little Venn Moore, now 7 years old, and Jeffrey Batter, age 6, were editing a school paper, run off in Thermofax, which is published once a month.

It contains stories — real stories — batted out on the electric typewriter by students who would have still been struggling with the alphabet and with simple sentences like "Oh, oh, see the dog," if they had not encountered Dr. Moore's methods.

There are many interesting things about Dr. Moore's school. To begin with, he has electric typewriters that "talk back" to the pupils, telling them, by means of ingenious electro-auditory hook-ups which I do not fully comprehend, when they make mistakes and when they have completed a word correctly.

But the most enlightening thing of all was the fact that Dr. Moore had succeeded in taking a pre-kindergartener with an "I.Q." of 81, which is really on the low side, and had taught him to read and write at standard first grade level. He has other retardates who find the electric typewriter stimulating.

What is the general significance of Dr. Moore's experiment? Isn't it just possible that virtually our entire school population has been "underplaced" by keeping them in the sandbox until the age of 6?

February Thaw According To Senator Humphrey

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — "Page boy . . ." It's a familiar exclamation heard on the floor of both the House or Senate as lawmakers call the page boys to run a bill to the rostrum, or simply run an errand.

Page boys come and go — once in a while they stay on. This is the saga of one of those rarities, one of those who "stayed on" — a little known "success story" that most certainly has its niche in Pennsylvania's legislative annals.

The story goes back to 1939 when a 19-year-old youth, barely out of high school and with his hair slicked down, asked for a job as a page boy in the State Senate — and got it.

He went into the page boy chore with the endorsement of one M. Harvey Taylor, who the following year was to begin his first term as a State Senator in a tenure that is still continuing — not only continuing, but in fact finds the venerable Senator Taylor today holding the most powerful and influential post in the Senate, that of Senate President Pro Tem.

Much has changed since that page boy started what he thought then would be merely a temporary job — a job that paid only $2 per day (requiring duty in those days seven days a week!).

Today that lad (who incidentally started his page boy chore a year after this reporter, then fresh out of college, first started covering Capitol Hill) holds the top administrative post in Pennsylvania's State Senate at a salary of $12,000 a year!

His name is Mark Gruell, Jr., who at 42 has broken several precedents.

The story of Mark Gruell is one of the more interesting tales worth recounting — and at this particular time — for the simple reason that in an area on Capitol Hill constantly charged with political overtones, Senate Secretary Gruell has succeeded "in spite" of these political overtones.

His first break, if it can be called that, came in 1943 when he was made compiling clerk in the Senate and chief compiling clerk in 1947. Ten years later he was named assistant secretary of the Senate.

The crucial part however in the career of Mark Gruell seemingly occurred during that period leading up to 1957. That was when he took a second look at what might be ahead of him — other than remaining as just a page boy. He studied legislative procedures and routine, made a habit of tucking away little items in the back of his alert mind, studying the complicated and involved phases of legislative operations, particularly as they pertained to the Senate.

(Perhaps one of the "spurs" in this direction occurred during 1941 when Josephine Arganzano, of Sharon, came to Capitol Hill as a stenographer — whom he subsequently married!)

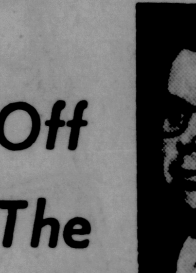

The Secretary of the Senate theoretically is the parliamentary officer of the upper house — guiding the presiding officer on what to do, when to do it, how to do it; he becomes the official voice on rules.

In the mid-1940's this chore fell for the most part on Gruell's shoulders — even though the full Senate Secretary officially is the parliamentarian.

In 1960 when Senate Secretary Edward B. Watson died in office, Gruell moved up to the top post — which he held for the remaining six months of the year. Significantly when Democrats took over organizational control of the Senate in 1961 for the first time and when other Republican "hold-overs" were being ousted, Mark Gruell was retained, but again as assistant secretary.

In contemporary times the post of full Senate Secretary almost invariably has gone to a former lawmaker, as one of those "palsy" jobs. Mark Gruell never served as a lawmaker — but he did serve as a page boy!

When the Senate recognized for the current 1963 session, it was Mark Gruell who drew the support of Democrats as well as Republicans for the full secretaryship — a career man who there ever was one who has

Off The Record

By BOB CLARK

Clyde Burke, the southern gentleman who did so much for the north — especially the Pocono Mountains — is bedded down these days.

Burke, public information officer at Tobyhanna Army Depot, suffered a heart attack recently and will be sidelined for three months.

Despite his setback, Burke showed concern over the recent visit of the Bloodmobile. Clyde called this Bloodmobile, and asked how the Red Cross' blood bank fared. When told 132 pints were donated the man who has done more than his share in blood campaigns said, "I feel somewhat better already."

Clyde is the man responsible for the great work of the depot in blood campaigns.

Answer to query of reader: Bill Johnson, the Stroudsburg man who rocketed to the assistant secretary post in Gov. William Scranton's office receives a yearly salary of $12,700.

This figure was put out by the State Auditor General's Office, Johnson's paymaster while he is working in Harrisburg.

Paul Carlson, former reporter for the Daily Record, is public information official for the United Presbyterian Church.

Carlson, an ordained minister, recently covered the World Council of Churches Conference in New Delhi, India, and also penned stories on church affairs from Geneva, Switzerland.

He now lives in West New York, N. J. with his wife, Myrtle, and their three children.

Jim Murphy, one of the officials completing plans for the State Knights of Columbus Conference at Tamiment in the Spring, sees more than 1,000 Knights and their families invading the Pocono Mountains for the seasons.

Murphy, a Stroudsburg resident, is lining up activities for the K of C delegates during their week-long stay in the mountains.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader that it was poor manners to use a toilet in public. I agree with you. But why bother with that when every day millions of so-called refined people commit a far more grievous social error by befouling the air with stinking cigarette and cigar smoke? If a person picks his teeth in public, those who don't like it can always look away. But if someone lights up a cigarette or a smelly cigar, those who don't like it can either jump it or leave the room.

The Allen-Scott Report

Alliance For Progress Head On Way Out

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott
Washington — Theodore Moscoso, head of the long-dissolving Alliance for Progress, is on the way out.

While that backstage decision has been definitely reached, how soon he will be replaced depends on solving two thorny problems: (1) Finding a top-notch successor; (2) What to do with Moscoso.

The Puerto Rican is a close friend of Governor Luis Munoz Marin, who has strong ties with the Kennedy administration. Marin "loaned" Moscoso to the President when his much-hailed Alliance for Progress got off to a boggled start. Moscoso is earnest and idealistic, but has done little better than his inadequate predecessor.

But to avoid offending Marin, and also because Moscoso is personally liked, the President is proceeding carefully in easing him out. But that is definitely in the works.

The man the President would like to put in this tough job is Thomas Mann, ambassador to Mexico.

An able, widely-experienced career diplomat who was Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs in the Eisenhower regime and was continued in that post by Kennedy until sent to Mexico, Mann has the drive and know-how that running the sagging Alliance urgently needs.

But he has let it be known he doesn't want this appointment. Whether Mann can be induced to change his mind, or someone else can be found, remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, in an effort to counter the rising chorus of congressional complaints against the Alliance, the White House is quietly putting out the word that Moscoso is no longer really bossing it. In other words, he is now little more than a figurehead.

Significant Critics — That was the import of what Ralph Dungan, 38-year-old Special Assistant to the President, told a group of lawmakers when they protested Alliance mismanagement.

"Don't take your problems to Moscoso," Dungan advised them. "Bring them directly here to us. We will see to it that they are taken care of. Moscoso means well, but things just aren't working out satisfactorily."

Dungan ought to know. Of the inner White House staff, he is among the closest to the President. He plays a key role in filling vacancies, and lately has been increasingly occupied with foreign affairs. To their private astonishment, he lectured a group of ambassadors on "the requirements of new diplomacy." Dungan did not explain his qualifications for expounding on this subject.

A Princeton graduate, he is sometimes referred to by White House insiders as the "intellectual of the Kennedy Mafia."

Significantly, some of Moscoso's sharpest critics are leading Democratic senators who staunchly support the President's foreign policies.

Foremost among them are Senator Wayne Morse, Ore., chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Latin America, Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Hubert Humphrey, Minn., and Senator Ernest Gruening, Alaska, who had extensive experience in South America during the New Deal. They have bluntly told the President that Moscoso must be replaced and without delay.

Morse asserted Moscoso "is over his head and hasn't got what it takes." He particularly assailed an Alliance rebuff to Mexican plans to rebuild its border cities. Morse blasted this stand as "silly and stupid."

Gruening went further, denouncing the policy of "mistakenly bailing out shaky and unstable Latin American regimes."

"We are told that we cannot support many urgent domestic needs because we cannot afford them," said Gruening. "Yet the administration continues to pour vast sums into unstable countries. It makes loans that are not loans at all, but give-aways. Actually, our money is not only being wasted, but the very result of trying to help countries in that manner is counter-productive. It prevents these countries from reforming themselves and getting on a stable basis."

"Unless restraint, vigilance and intelligence are exercised, the whole program will go down the drain. And the billions of dollars that we have spent and the billions more it is proposed to spend will be completely wasted."

Three members of a special Commerce Department advisory committee on the Alliance for Progress voiced a very similar warning.

David Rockefeller, head of Chase National Bank, Emilio Collado, Vice President of Standard Oil of New Jersey, and Walter Wriston, Vice President of the First National Bank of New York, in a detailed report concluded:

"The U.S. must change its role from one that emphasizes short run economic palliatives combined with recommendations for sweeping social and economic reforms, to one that places the greatest emphasis on the long-run goals of creating an environment in which freedom of the market place is recognized for what it is, a major pillar of free and prosperous societies."

Foreign Flashes — Ceylon, which got much U.S. aid until it was cut off recently because of refusal to pay debts owed U.S. firms, is now going to get handouts from Communist Poland — a big beneficiary of U.S. largesse in the form of loans and sales of surplus food stocks for Polish currency which remains in that country. Poland and Ceylon have signed an agreement under which the former will supply most of Ceylon's hardware and small tools in the next few years.

Dr. Johnson says:

Alcohol And Health

Generally alcohol, intelligently used, will not harm your health. Dr. Hans Selye, director of the Montreal Institute of Experimental Medicine, frequently advises persons to have at least one drink a day. He believes that stress is the principal underlying cause of many of man's most serious ailments, and he feels that an occasional drink, as an effective relaxant, is useful against stress.

I myself have long felt that there is a definite benefit in a before-dinner alcoholic beverage. However, I advise that all understand the effects of an alcoholic beverage on the brain. It doesn't matter whether you take it straight, on the rocks, or in a mixed drink. Only the strength and amount of the alcohol that reaches your brain will determine what happens to you, whether you become merely gay or completely "pickled."

Alcohol is not a stimulant, not a pick-me-up. It is a sedative, let-you-down. If you take too much alcohol, you will see dramatic proof of its sedative effect — you'll pass out cold, just as if you were sedated with an anesthetic.

I tell the patients to whom I prescribe a before-dinner drink to make it tall and well-diluted drink of about one and a half ounces of whiskey, rum or gin. Since it is the effect of the alcohol that is important, it does not matter whether the drink is bourbon, Scotch, or rye.

I tell the lady of the house not to have dinner ready until papa has been home at least half an hour and has sipped his drink.

Let him take his time with it so that when he sits down to dinner he will feel relaxed.

Sobriety Test

How do you determine scientifically whether or not a drinker is intoxicated, or even whether one man may be drunker than another? To eliminate the contradictions of human observation, science has established certain technical standards to meet this problem. These standards consist of measuring the amount of alcohol in the brain.

The measuring is done by calculating how much alcohol there is in the blood stream and then, by mathematical extrapolation, relating this to the amount of alcohol that actually would be in the brain. The amount of alcohol in the blood may be measured either directly from a blood sample of alcohol-laden breath. The result is expressed as a percentage of alcohol in the blood.

The widely accepted standards are these:

1. If you have .05 per cent alcohol in your blood, it is presumed that you are not drunk.
2. If your blood contains between .10 and .15 per cent alcohol, the police presume that you are drunk, although if a traffic violation is involved, they may need additional evidence to prove that you were incapable of operating your car safely.
3. If your blood contains over .15 per cent alcohol, it is assumed, without question, that you are quite drunk and not capable of doing anything safely or rationally.

Chance Stroud Union To Be Left As Is, Groner Says

"THERE is a chance," Earl F. Groner, superintendent of the Stroud Union School District said last night, "that the district might be left as is under the school reorganization program, if educational requirements are met."

Groner spoke at the regular meeting of the school district at the high school.

Groner noted that the district had to meet Gov. Soranton's cri-

Juries Will Be Drawn For Trials Of 2 Local Men

TWO juries will be drawn Monday morning for the trials of Master Sgt. Robert Schoonover, East Stroudsburg, and First Sgt. Vincent Marek Jr. for their trials before Chief Judge Michael H. Sheridan, federal court, in Scranton.

Marek, of Tannersville will go on trial first and the Schoonover jury will be retired until his trial comes up, which is to follow the Marek trial.

Both men, members of "A" Co. First Battle Group, 109th Inf., 28th Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, East Stroudsburg, were indicted in January by a federal grand jury on various charges of fraud and forgery.

Also indicted by the same jury was Gerald E. Shanley Jr., a former commanding officer. However, no trial date has been set for him.

Served Subpoenas
The Daily Record learned yesterday that U.S. Marshalls have served subpoenas on 12 persons in the county to testify at the trials.

PM Joint Awards Contract

SWIFTWATER — The joint school committee of Pocono Mountains Joint Schools last night voted to accept the recommendation of Kookan, Stabler and Associates and award a contract for two Well-McLain boilers to Fred C. Kresge Jr., Scranton, at his low bid of $4,548.

The action was taken at a meeting adjourned from Tuesday night. The contract is subject to final approval by the Dept. of Public Instruction in Harrisburg.

The boilers will be installed in the Pocono Township School at Tannersville. A committee spokesman said it expects to solicit bids for installation early next week.

Honesdale Authority Sells Bonds

HONESDALE — Honesdale Municipal Authority has sold a $1.06 million refunding bond issue to Ira Haupt (AP) Co., New York City.

Sale of the issue was completed Feb. 8, according to Attorney John J. Koehler, authority counsel. The bonds will be retired over a 40-year period with receipts and revenues from the borough sewer system.

Proceeds from the new issue were used to retire a $1.07 million issue sold in 1959 to obtain funds for construction of a new $1.5 million sewage disposal plant.

Attorney Koehler said the refunding took place because of more favorable interest rates now available on the bond market.

Principal and semiannual interest will be paid starting Sept. 15, at the Girard Trust Corp. Exchange Bank, Philadelphia, as trustee.

The sewage disposal plant, one of the most modern in the area, was placed in operation Sept. 30, 1961, after 10 years of planning and construction.

filled out upon the districts' application for supplemental reimbursement."

Supplemental reimbursement is given to districts that meet certain educational standards — high standards that are set up by the state. The Stroud Union district met all the categories' requirements, Groner added, and there were about 20 categories.

The board also heard representatives from the Stroudsburg Borough Council on the possibility of extending the lease on the borough playground.

The first lease was drawn up in 1940 and has three years to run, but the borough council members said that the borough would like to make improvements upon the property, but cannot do so under the present lease.

Joseph H. Small, mayor of Stroudsburg, spokesman for the council, requested that a possible 99-year lease be taken in the near future, rather than waiting for the lease to expire.

Small said that such improvements as tennis courts, picnic areas, handball, and basketball courts might be set up on the playground area.

A 99-year lease, Small said, would be of sufficient length to almost constitute ownership, thus allowing the borough to go ahead with improvements plans.

He added that solicitors from the board and the borough could work out the arrangements of the new lease.

School district solicitor Edward Williams noted that legal problems had to be worked out. He said that a 99-year lease might be impractical because of possible future expansion of the present buildings of the high school, but that a lease of sufficient length to make capital improvements possible should be granted.

He also said that the lease must be approved by the State Committee on Education.

Board members John Baymor, Earl Groner, John Lam, Mrs. Sophie Stulgaitis, and Williams were appointed to the committee to work out the terms of the lease.

In other business, Don Thomas was added to the list of substitute teachers, and Robert Hellman was selected to be the representative of the board to the Legislative Council of the Pennsylvania School Boards Association. John Baymor was named as alternate.

Accepts Resolution
The board accepted a resolution concerning execution of a lease between the State Public School Building Authority and the district.

Feb. 27 was set as the date for a meeting of a committee of the whole with the teachers' salary committee of the district.

In action on the purchase of acreage from Joseph H. Beers, to be used for a new addition to the high school, the board noted that a final transaction price of $2,500 was set and that a 10 per cent deposit had been made.

Beers set the date for payment of the balance at March 15.

One Hurt In Eastburg Accident

ONE PERSON was slightly hurt in the collision of a car and a State Highways Dept. truck at 5:40 p.m. Tuesday at N. Courtland and Crystal Sts., East Stroudsburg.

George C. Henry, 39, of 483 Youngwood Dr., East Stroudsburg, the truck driver, was treated at Monroe County General Hospital for minor injuries and released.

State Police of the local barracks said a car driven by Stanley C. Melvin, 23, of 1114 W. Main St., Stroudsburg, skidded and struck the truck on a small hill. There was extensive damage, troopers said.

The truck was traveling east on N. Courtland St. spreading cinders when the crash occurred.

Rep. Van D. Yetter Jr., also addressed the meeting, and declared that from his personal observation of the current Republican administration in Harrisburg only two things had been accomplished — passage by the Republican legislature of a

Demos Urged To Wean Young

SCRANTON attorney Michael Simon, president of the Lackawanna County Young Democratic Club, last night challenged the members of the Monroe County Democratic Committee to cultivate new registration from the ground up by making and keeping new friends among the young people.

Speaking at a dinner meeting at the Stroud Township Municipal Building, Simon noted that the Democratic party had carried Lackawanna County in the last election by substantial majorities in spite of it being the home area of the opposition candidate.

"The reason," he said, "was that we got through to all the voters, and especially the new young voters—and we found that the young voter of today is as interested in the problems of today as his father was 25 years ago, as interested in medical care for the aged as was his father in social security. The Democratic party seeks out these problems, and solves them, and when the young voter realizes that, he votes Democratic."

The meeting was held to kick off the registration drive of the Monroe County Democratic Committee, and was presided over by county Democratic chairman W. G. C. Peterson, after having been organized by a special committee composed of James Cadue, chairman; District Attorney James Marsh and John Hogan.

Peterson introduced the chairman and members of the registration committee, Stuart Pipher, Chairman, Mrs. Grace Palmer, Mrs. Lillian Price, and Donald DePue. Mrs. Palmer announced that the regular monthly meeting of the Monroe County Young Democratic Club would be held on Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 8 p.m. in the Stroud Community House in Stroudsburg.

Hospital Expansion In Bidding Stage

The Stroudsburg office of Rinker, Keifer and Rake, architects for the proposed expansion program at the General Hospital of Monroe County have announced that 40 contractors located within the hospital service area have been invited to participate in the bidding for the construction of the new wing.

All of the contractors listed were mailed an inquiry on Jan. 29 with the request that they indicate their interest or lack of interest by Feb. 6. M. R. Keifer of the architectural firm announced that by that date 15 contractors had indicated an interest. Eighteen had indicated a lack of interest and seven did not respond.

Plans and specifications were forwarded to the interested contractors on Feb. 18. Bids will be received on or before March 18, 1963.

Keifer explained that construction can probably be authorized and started during the month of April.

Montgomery F. Grove, president of the Hospital Board, stated that bids were restricted to contractors within the area because the residents were largely responsible for the $1,205,000 raised in the Expansion Fund during the past year and a half. He stated that the board had established the policy of "Home Contractors."

Grove also emphasized the fact that total bids will probably exceed the $1,500,000 estimate more than two years ago because of increased costs. He pointed out, however, that the generosity of the local area residents in over-subscribing the goal of $1,000,000 will make possible the immediate construction. The Federal Government has granted $500,000 under the Hill-Burton Act toward the total cost, which is now expected to exceed the $1,500,000 estimate.

When questioned relating to the length of time of construction, Keifer explained that the new wing will have to be completed, fully equipped and occupied before the work can start on the old wing renovation. It is hoped that the new wing will be completed and occupied during the Spring of 1964 and that renovations to the old wing can then begin and be completed by early 1965.

Keystone Shortway

Sen. Confair Uses Bear Call To Advantage

(Ed. Note: This is the third of a series of articles on the Keystone Shortway, giving its history from its inception up to its present state of construction. We are certain that readers in the Monroe County area will find the series interesting. They were written for the Keystone Shortway Association by Jack Feeley, Danville News Editor.)

WILLIAMSPORT, PA. — A few days after Richardson Dilworth, mayor of Philadelphia uttered his classic about the highway needs of Pennsylvania's urban centers being met before roads are built to "satisfy the curiosity of bears," Z. H. Confair showed up in the Senate chamber at Harrisburg. He was armed with a bear call. Whenever Senator Confair, also president of the Keystone Shortway Association . . . the main target of Dilworth's blast . . . got needed by colleagues, he'd whip out the bear call and let go. Time after time the tactic brought down the house, or, more correctly the Senate, and soon turned what could have been a damaging retort into a tremendous promotional asset.

It didn't take the Williamsport legislator long to have the word "bear" made the worry of people in towns along the Shortway route. And with telling effect.

Hurt Campaign
Dilworth's crack came in 1958. He was still hearing about it during the 1962 gubernatorial campaign. The bear statement, without a doubt, helped defeat Dilworth when he made his bid for the governor's office.

Governor Scranton won a majority in each of the 15 Shortway counties, beating his opponent by over 75,000 votes in these areas alone. Shortway people apparently could not forgive Dilworth, despite his later change of mind, for leading the opposition to "their road" in those crucial early days.

Confair, of course, had no way of knowing, in 1958, that Dilworth would some day be running for governor.

He saw the bear statement, and subsequent frequent use of the bear call solely as weapons — to rally his people around a cause, to encourage them toward making even greater efforts on behalf of the Shortway.

He succeeded remarkably well. Battering for the 308-mile freeway is nothing new for Senator Confair, who doubles as a Williamsport soft drink distributor. In it from the first hours, he is known to some newspapers as the road's "Big Daddy," and "Father" — titles which he quickly discounts.

"The Shortway has no fathers, no big daddies that I can see. If it does, there are certainly more than one or even a few. Hundreds of men and women, from all walks of life have been in this fight for many years and have made important contributions to its success.

"We're not looking for heroes, we're looking for a highway."

Someone has to lead, however, and everyone knows it has been Confair doing the leading — or better, perhaps, the "quarterbacking" — since he took over the Shortway Association helm in 1964.

Senator Confair, like all Shortway supporters, is positively convinced the new highway will benefit north central Pennsylvania, the entire Commonwealth, and, in addition, the northeast part of the United States where "half the population of the nation resides and where half of its motor vehicles are owned."

Most of the counties along the Shortway route are economically depressed, and steadily losing population.

Industry, the backbone of any economy, has been staying clear because adequate transportation facilities are lacking. The Stroudsburg-to-Sharon highway will traverse all this, Confair is sure, pointing to the dramatic effect the Pennsylvania Turnpike has had on communities near which it passes.

Three Points
Confair contends the Shortway will, at the least:

1. Greatly increase existing and new industry, bringing outside capital, through payrolls, to employees, who, in turn, will channel much of their income to retailers, into recreation and varied services.
2. Trucking will undoubtedly fare best as it will be the chief form of transportation to move raw materials and finished goods from along the route to the great markets east and west of Pennsylvania. Air service will also improve, and rail service, now sparse, should increase in certain areas.

3. Recreation is bound to come into its own with the growth of existing facilities and development of new ones. Residents along the Shortway and unpredictable numbers from out-of-state will take advantage of the recreational areas, resulting in millions of more dollars being fed into the economy.

If the proof of the pudding is in the eating, the proof of the Shortway is in the Pennsylvania Turnpike, the legislator declares.

"Just look at what the Turnpike did for Bedford, Somerset, Greensburg and some of those other towns.

"When the Pike opened, industry came in and so did the tourists. Bedford at first was one of the chief opponents of the Turnpike. Now Bedford is one of the major opponents of the Shortway because it is afraid of losing business which the Pike has provided.

Prime Example
"Somerset is another prime example. It used to be a farmers' market town. Now it ranks among the top 10 cities in the United States in per-person spending. "Monroeville, seven years after Route 22 was linked to the Turnpike, saw its property values increase 336 per cent and its population boost 119 per cent.

"And these are just a few instances."

"The Shortway offers the same great potential for north central Pennsylvania. Highway experts have said it. Business and industrial leaders have said it. So have business analysts. And so too, does the Keystone Shortway Association. I'm positive that when the road is completed, prosperity will come to our region and our people."

The burly State Senator from Williamsport presents a convincing case. And he has about 3,000,000 residents in north central Pennsylvania to back him up.

Dr. Tolley To Preside

SOUTH STERLING — Dr. Earl V. Tolley, Scranton District Superintendent, will preside at the Fourth Quarterly Conference at the South Sterling Methodist Church on March 24 at 8 p.m.

The conference is open to everyone, and reports will be heard from officers of each commission, organization and activity of the church.

Chairman Named

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Dr. Eric A. Walker, president of Pennsylvania State University, was named Tuesday to serve as chairman of National Library Week in Pennsylvania, April 21-27.

29 Per Cent Of Monroe's Homes Under 10 Years Old

HOW much of Monroe County's annual economic activity is due to housing construction? How does the local production of new homes compare with that in other parts of the county?

Answers to these questions are contained in report issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce. They show, for every city and county in the nation, the number of new dwellings erected over a period of 10 years.

Locally, the amount of such construction and the changes that have been wrought by it are impressive when viewed in perspective.

The reports show that no less than 5,473 dwelling units in Monroe County, or 28.5 percent of the present total of 19,150, were built since 1950.

Many old houses were torn down in connection with this building and re-building surge. How many is not stated.

3.2 Persons

As a result of these changes, the occupancy rate per housing unit locally now averages 3.2 persons. Throughout the country as a whole, the average is 3.4 per unit. Various factors are listed as responsible for the spurt in home building that took place in the 1950-60 decade.

Primarily, it stems from the desire of most families to have places of their own. This desire they were able to gratify as their incomes grew larger and as mortgage financing became easier. It brought home ownership within their reach.

Nationally, as a result, some 63 percent of the families now own their own homes, as against 55 percent in 1950. It is estimated that an additional 10 to 12 percent have sufficient income and savings to become home owners if they want to.

For its size, Monroe County had a high rate of new construction in the 10-year period. It amounted to 154 dwelling units per 1,000 residents, based on average local population.

This compares favorably with the rate reported for the United States, 96 units per 1,000. In the Middle Atlantic States it was 72 per 1,000.

$81,548,000
What did this volume of construction add up to in terms of the local economy? On the basis of the average sales price of new, non-farm houses regionally during the decade, it amounted to an estimated $81,548,000.

Its effect, because it stimulated activity in allied fields, was several times that great.

Increase Navy Ships

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Fourteen ships will be added to Mexico's fleet this year, doubling the tonnage to 600,000, officials said.

Young GOP Gets Merit Certificate

THE YOUNG Republican Club of Monroe County recently was presented with a certificate of merit from Craig Truax, chairman of Young Republican Clubs of Pennsylvania.

Atty. Edwin Krawitz, chairman of the local club, was advised that the organization was tops in the state during the recent campaign.

The award states "... for political activities advancing our party's mission to enroll all Americans in the patriotic service of maintaining and leading the free institution of self government in our Republic. The certificate witnesses outstanding citizen service to State and Nation, and, particularly, is awarded for outstanding achievement in the 1962 gubernatorial campaign which returned the Republican Party to leadership in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

Barrabas Opens Today At Sherman

Several of the sets in the new picture are more than 2,000 years old. For example, an entrance into Rome used a stretch of the famed Via Appia Antica. A street used is one on which the conquering legions of Caesar once marched.

Another old set used is a bridge crossing the Tiber River that was constructed more than 2,000 years ago and is still in use.

The company, unable to use the Colosseum, moved to a nearby island to use an arena built before the famed Colosseum for scenes of fighting gladiators.

Richard Fleischer directed the movie and the two leading roles played by Jack Palance and Quinn.

By GEORGE ARFELD

Hilton To Run St. Paul Hotel

NEW YORK (AP)—Hilton Hotels Corp. will operate a $12 million, 22-story hotel to be built in St. Paul, Minn., the firm announced.

The 500-room downtown hotel is being financed by $5.5 million being raised by a St. Paul group, $500,000 capital from the Hilton company and the rest from an institutional investor.

Socialist Revolution (PURS) Friday night.

Diplomats saw the announced speech as one of several indications that organizational work is nearing completion on PURS, this country's version of a monolithic, Marxist-Leninist party.

Another sign has been the increasing appearance in the press of references to the formation of political units or cadres. And more and more government leaders are referring to "the party."

Some East European observers, however, dispute the belief that the party is anywhere near ready for a formal unveiling.

Diplomatic sources in close contact with government leaders say that the party will be unable to function as long as the Castro regime does not make a clear choice between the conflicting policies of Moscow and Peking. Cuba has kept out of the ideological battle, but there are signs the Cuban leadership leans more to the Chinese get-tough policy than the Soviet peaceful coexistence approach.

As long as Cuba remains heavily dependent on Soviet aid, informants say, it will find it difficult to adopt a definite political line.

In the present transitional stage, Cuban politics are master-minded by the Revolutionary Integrated Organizations (ORI), regarded as the stepping stone to a Communist party.

Torrance's Second Plea For Freedom Is Heard

HARRISBURG (AP)—James F. Torrance's second plea for freedom since he began serving a prison term for his part in the 1955-56 tampering scandals was heard by the State Pardons Board Wednesday.

The 35-year-old former member of the State Turnpike Commission cited grounds of ill health in asking that his two-year sentence be commuted to the 18 months he already has served in the Dauphin County Prison.

A similar petition for commutation was denied by the board last year.

Torrance was one of four officials convicted in 1957 of conspiracy to defraud the Turnpike Commission of $19.5 million. The state charged that the conspiracy involved contracts for landfills on the Northeast Extension of the Turnpike.

After all legal recourses had been exhausted, Torrance began serving his sentence in July of 1961.

Another defendant, Thomas J. Evans, 73, of Coaldale, former chairman of the commission, was released from Harrisburg Hospital earlier this year after completing the minimum term. He had spent most of the sentence as a patient in the hospital.

Torrance's attorneys produced a statement from Dr. A. W. Cowley, a Camp Hill heart specialist, which said Torrance suffered from a hypertensive heart ailment, plus a pulmonary condition which makes it difficult for him to breathe and subjects him to chronic coughing spasms.

The attorneys also presented two letters from Victor Wright, former head of the State Justice Department's investigative division, which uncovered the evidence used in the Turnpike trials.

In the first, Wright wrote that Torrance was rightfully convicted, but added his belief that it would be proper to grant him his release at this time.

In the second letter, Wright said that if he were a member of the board he "would unhesitatingly vote" for clemency.

Dauphin County District Atty. Martin H. Lock told the board he was not opposed to Torrance's application, although he did not recommend any action to be taken. Lock said he felt that Torrance would be no risk to society if granted his release.

At Educators Parley

Alerted To 'Shared Time'

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—A Connecticut educator said Tuesday the only way to stop the seemingly endless bickering over federal aid to education is a national program of "shared time" between public and parochial schools.

Theodore Powell of the Connecticut State Department of Education said shared-time programs have been proved workable, do not violate separation of church and state, and have generally broad support.

He gave his views in a paper prepared for the annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators.

Shared time is an arrangement of the school schedule which permits regularly enrolled pupils of a nonpublic school to take part of their education in a public school.

"For example," Powell said, "in Connecticut cities, Catholic school pupils in the 7th and 8th grades attend a neighboring public school for a double period once a week to receive instruction in industrial arts for the boys, or home economics for the girls.

"This instruction is given in the public school classroom by a public school teacher. The Catholic school pupils become, in a sense, part-time public school pupils for these courses."

Powell said President Kennedy's 24-point program of federal aid to education appears doomed because the public school forces and the Catholic school force will meet in direct conflict on the issue of federal aid to parochial schools. "There is every likelihood that this conflict will result in another stalemate; Congress will take no action on aid to education," he said.

Powell said shared-time programs had been working successfully in some parts of 20 states for as long as 20 years.

At Penn State, Newcombe served primarily as a counselor to athletes and as liaison between the university and high schools.

Master Builders Plan Event

THE MONROE County Master Builders and Contractors Association met Tuesday night at the Cherry Valley Inn, Delaware Water Gap for its monthly meeting. Further plans were made for the annual parade of Homes to be held April 20-21 and April 27-28.

Dick Frantz introduced Chief Forester Robbins, of the Dept. of Forests and Waters, who gave an illustrated lecture with slides on lumbering and forest preservation.

President Lou Mandle stated that the March meeting would be held at the Cherry Valley Inn.

Local Areas To Share In Fuels Tax

HARRISBURG—Gov. Scranton will continue the policy of distributing 90 percent of the liquid fuels tax money to local municipalities on April 1.

The remaining 10 percent will be sent out Oct. 1.

This pattern will give the state's 2,500 municipalities most of their liquid fuels money in plenty of time for summer road construction.

There is an estimated $38 million to be distributed.

The law says local municipalities must receive the money in two payments but it does not say in what ratio. The law requires that payments be made on April 1 and Oct. 1.

The present system of paying 90 and 10 percent was instituted by the Democratic administration of Gov. Leader. Gov. Lawrence continued with the system and now Gov. Scranton is maintaining it.

'Poor Working Girls' Earn Less Than Men In Comparable Job Responsibility

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

Is it true what they say about women—when it comes to matching the so-called weaker sex's pay check against the stronger sex's check?

Unfortunately for women who work, it is! So true, in fact, that even though women form one-third of the entire United States' working force, they take home only one-fifth of the total pay.

Equal Pay Law

At the moment the whole situation is a conflict without cure until the Federal government takes some steps to help by enacting a law that will require employers to give women equal pay for equal work.

In 22 states, state laws presently require this and in Federal jobs equal pay laws protect women who do the same jobs as men.

Poor Gal

But in states where there are no such laws some of the practices that currently exist are enough to make you shed a few honest tears for the "poor working girl" whose responsibilities are the same as a man's through widowhood, single blessedness or divorce.

Rightfully Shod

They are, however, rightfully shod for the female breadwinner who is being hurt by a non-existent Federal equal pay law that allows the average annual salary income to be $5,417 for men compared to $3,293 for women, according to 1960 figures from the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census.

They're also being shod for the lady breadwinner who's similarly being hurt by the many employers who list a job vacancy with a single title, then hire men at one and $60 to $70 for women. A clerk-typist's job paid $275 a month for a man and $240 for a woman. How did things get this way and what can we do about it?

Big Turnover

Right or wrong, employers who have been asked this question maintain the whole thing stems from the high rate of turnover among women because of marriage, housekeeping and family responsibilities. Employers also insist that in some of the jobs where men are paid more than women, men are more suited to the jobs.

With this stone wall that we're currently banging our heads against, what can we women do?

Face Facts

Mainly this: Face the fact that to match the men with comparable jobs and salaries women have to be twice as good.

And this, incidentally, is not a revival for feminism nor an "I'll show them!" attitude. This is reality.

Gals Don't Get Their Fair Share Of Total U.S. Payroll

rate and women at another. For example, one survey of this practice shows a bookkeeper's job with a wage of $75 a week for men

NY Couture Designers Range Wide

Designers returning from Europe where they shop for fabrics as well as ideas say it's been the roughest trip in years. Nat Bader, head man at Originals got off his whip at Gibraltar and motored to Madrid — a tougher feat than turning out a collection, according to this genial coat maestro — for the Spain country-side was enjoying floods all over the place. Once in Madrid where he joined Mrs. Bader, they couldn't get out. Nat calls the Madrid-Milan train the "Toonerville trolley" which takes about 5 days even in the best of weather. As the Baders were in the sensational near-accident via trans-Atlantic plane several seasons ago, Mrs. Bader is gun-shy. Nat says, "I chloroformed her and got her on the plane to Milan — and broke the jinx."

Now back, Bader looks brown and durable after a few lovely days in an Alpine aid resort. He is planning a new line — a less expensive couture collection which will excel in the same kind of fabrics and workmanship Originals has always stood for.

Diaphanous

Always famous for her exquisite fabrics, Romane for Samuel Winston does herself proud in her summer collection. Exclusive fabrics come from the far corners of the earth. For evening she does diaphanous fabrics in soft and vivid colors. Often chiffon or organza will sparkle with tiny beads that offer a flirtatious paradox to an otherwise tailored look. Romane stars the lifted waistline look often with fine pin-tucks to shape in the silhouette.

Nautical

If there is a sea-going motif in the next Monte-Sano & Pruzan collection, don't be surprised. Vincent Monte-Sano, co-owner of this famous house, who is also treasurer of The New York Couture Group, has a real nautical way with him. He is just back from the Miami-Nassau 1963 Southern Ocean Racing Conference for which he was one of an 8-man team that manned the Caloon, a 45-foot boat that placed sixth out of 48 in the race. He is tan, terrific and full of ideas for the fall-winter collection. Hannah Troy, in addition to being a twice-yearly visitor to Europe for fashion collections, has started a new line of imports — they are Belgium griffons, a breed of toy dogs that are extremely rare in America — look like a saucy miniature albatross with whiskers. One of her "babies" walked away with three honors at the recent Westminster show — first a blue ribbon, then Best of Breed, then Best of Winners.

Designer Bruno who learned his scissors skill when schooled by the late Hattie Carnegie personally, did his first collection for Herbert Sondheim this season... then wound the whole thing up by breaking an arm — appearing to take his bows with his arm in a black silk sling. Pink Cottillion The new summer collection by Gothe introduced a wonderful idea for debutantes — suggesting a bluish pink rather than white. It's a flatteringly sensible idea. "Buds" are usually blessed with tender coloring that pink does wonders for white may just fade them out. Idea: how beautiful an all-pink debutante cottillion would be!

Reese Paces ESSC To 76-70 Victory

THE Warriors of East Stroudsburg State College, paced by the stellar driving play of Burt Reese, handed the visiting Millersville Marauders a 76-70 defeat before a small crowd in the ESSC Fieldhouse last night.

Getting off to a fast start in the action-packed Pennsylvania State

Colleges Basketball Conference clash, Coach Mort Hochheiser's lads took a 10-3 lead before Millersville started to click. Mike Kometa, using a one-handed shot from the outside, pulled the Marauders to within striking distance of the Warriors midway in the first half and finally gained the lead.

But the ESSC quint kept pace with Millersville throughout the hectic session as the lead switched hands six times. Will Peifley, John Murphy and John Jones combined on a scoring spurt in the waning minutes to give the Warriors a 38-35 halftime advantage.

Peifley, Reese and Jones were the scoring combination at the start of the second half which provided ESSC with a 49-43 lead and they maintained that six-point advantage at 12:20 until Peifley and Murphy put together three straight dunks to provide a more comfortable 62-52 lead.

Fourth Win

Millersville could not come close to the Warriors after that spree as ESSC grabbed its fourth victory in the PSCAC and sixth overall.

Reese took scoring honors for the Warriors with 22 points on six fielders and 10 foul tips. Jones and Peifley each added 18 while Murphy was held to eight.

For Millersville, Kometa led with 23 tallies while Frank Ainsworth added 11 and Bill Eckert 10.

Oddly, both clubs scored exactly the same amount of points in each half — 38 for East Stroudsburg and 35 for Millersville.

East Stroudsburg's JV's had an easier time of it in the preliminary affair, routing the Millersville squad, 97-48.

Sanford Tells Of Cut Heel During 1962

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

BURLY Jack Sanford, 24-game winner for the National League champion San Francisco Giants, revealed today that he had pitched the final week of the 1962 baseball season with a 2-inch cut in his heel from an operation to remove an abscess.

Currently involved in a contract war with the Giants, Sanford put a couple of hot coals into the dispute Tuesday when he told the San Francisco Chronicle of his operation and implied that the Giants' pitching pattern was being used as a weapon against a hefty raise.

"Few people know this," said Sanford from his Duxbury, Mass., home, "but just before I beat St. Louis 4-2 in the final week I had an operation on my heel to remove an abscess. A 2-inch long cut. It hurt. Toward the end I also worked with a cold that drained me. But I worked something like three games in six days."

The fastballing right-hander who won 16 consecutive games at one stretch as the Giants made their run at the front-running Los Angeles Dodgers, then fired a verbal broadside.

"Chub (Giants Vice President Chub Feeney) mentioned I didn't complete many games last year. Thirteen. But that was the ordered pattern. Pitch as hard as I can as long as I can and then let the bullpen clean up."

Sanford's asking price for the 1963 campaign is believed to be in the neighborhood of $35,000, a boost of about $10,000, Sanford says he and the Giants are "far apart," which is taken to mean about $5,000.

"I want to sign," said Sanford. But I had a good year and they just haven't offered me what I think I deserve. I worked hard and I want to work hard again. I think I deserve a better shake than I'm getting."

While Sanford was jolting the Giants, the Cincinnati Reds, who finished third last year, received a shock from a different direction when they were notified that outfielder Vada Pinson had undergone an appendix operation and would miss the spring training period.

Several players, meanwhile, signed Tuesday. Catcher Elton Howard and pitcher Bill Stafford came to terms with the Yankees, pitcher Billy O'Dell with the Giants and pitcher Lew Burdette with Milwaukee.

Howard, who also plays in the outfield and at first base as needed, reportedly signed for $45,000 and Stafford for an estimated $22,000. No figure was given for O'Dell, but the 36-year-old Burdette, who slumped to a 19-9 mark with the Braves last year, agreed to terms reportedly calling for $40,000.

In The Majors

Big Town Has Best, Worst

NEW YORK — The big town has two favorites in the 1963 major league pennant races—the best and the worst.

When you say "best" you're talking about the world champion New York Yankees until someone proves otherwise.

And when you say "worst" that's no one else but the sad sack New York Mets who figure to make it into 10th place again despite Casey Stengel's hopeful off-season predictions.

In between are 18 other clubs of varying degrees of skills and prospects and where they'll finish is in the laps of the gods.

But when you go to a game in the big town you know just where you stand. The Yankees are gonna win more often than not and the Mets are born to lose.

Washington has the lovely Senators but where else can a ticket buyer know in advance what he's letting himself in for?

Los Angeles has the Dodgers, who'll be in the thick of the race and could take it all. It also has the exciting new Angels, who rate at least a shot at the first division after their third-place last season.

Chicago has the White Sox, an average team that plays like an average team should, and it has the Cubs, who are bad but not bad enough to finish back of the Mets no matter how many coaches have their fingers in the pie.

In San Francisco, there are the league champion Giants, who could be even better than last year when they took the Yankees down to the third out in the seventh game of the World Series. And Cincinnati shows off the Reds, a good bet to give 'em a run for the flag.

HOT ROD — Inventor Warren Neuman (left) and Frank Batchelor, both of Berkeley, Calif., pose in hunter's amphibian that travels four knots afloat or 18 m.p.h. on land.

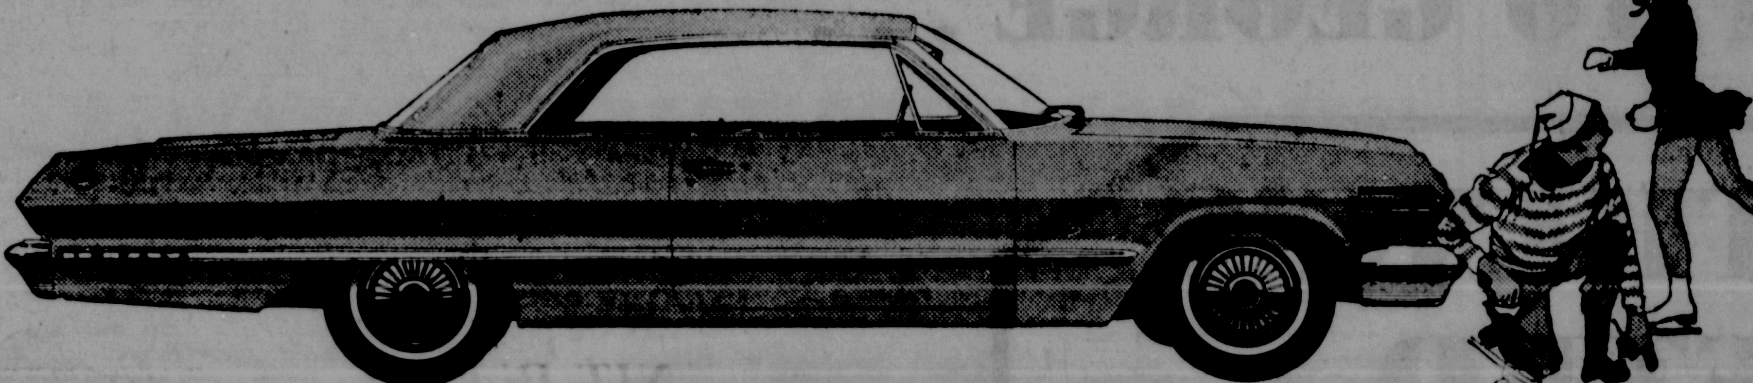

JAKE Wood of the Detroit Tigers had a fine stolen base average last season—24 for 27.

EDWIN Charles, Kansas City third baseman, stole 20 bases in 24 efforts last season.

Four different ways to make going more fun than getting there

You can see why one of America's favorite outdoor sports is driving Chevrolets, with four entirely different kinds of cars like these to choose from. There's the Jet-smooth Chevrolet, about as luxurious as you can go without going overboard in price (has lots of new lower up-keep features, too, like a flush-and-dry rocker panel ventilating system that helps remove rust-causing salt and slush); the new low-cost Chevy II, a good-looking, fun-loving car that would send any family packing; another perennial family favorite, the sporty Corvair, whose rear-engine traction will make you think that ice and snow are kid stuff; and for pure driving adventure, America's only homegrown sports car, Corvette—now in two all-new versions with looks that can stop traffic like a rush-hour blizzard. Chances are you've already picked your favorite. The next thing is to take the wheel at your Chevrolet dealer's. If that doesn't have you thinking of places to go, maybe you'd rather just have a ball around town!

Tennessee Horse Is In Virginia School

Waynesboro, Va. (AP) — "Virginia traditionally is hunter country," said the 27-year-old horseman. "To my knowledge this state, while proud of its hunters and hounds, has never produced a champion walking horse."

"We intend to remedy this oversight."

David Welsh comes from the walking horse country for he is a native of Tennessee. As a trainer he has worked with one world champion Tennessee walking horse and with two reserve world champions.

"We believe we have a potential world champion," says Welsh. "We intend to find out when we begin our season of shows in late March."

The apple of Welsh's horse eye is Beaumont's Souvenir, a 3-year-old gelding owned by the Beaumont Stables of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Gorsuch of Waynesboro.

"A walking horse is just that — a horse that walks," emphasizes Welsh. "It is the one horse that is not trained to run. A walking horse can be identified by the fact that he always has three feet on the ground. His two right legs are paced together and his two left legs are paced together. Walking horses are the most comfortable ones to ride."

They are trained to three gaits: flat walk, running walk and canter. The primary objective is to teach the horse to pace. The horse is first ridden when he is 18 months old.

"After about three months, heavier shoes are added and the first two gaits are started. The canter is added when the horse is about 30 months old."

Following the address by Dr. Mackey there will be small group conferences to deal with the subject matter presented by the guest speaker.

Area Church Plans Full Minister

SOUTH STERLING—The South Sterling Methodist Charge has taken a step forward in deciding to obtain the services of a full-time minister for the charge, beginning after Conference this Spring.

When the Rev. Harry C. Roof, who served the charge for 29 years in a ministry which lasted for 40 years, retired, he was succeeded by the Rev. Arthur B. Campney, a student at Drew University. Then, two years ago, Rev. Mr. Campney returned to his home charge in Iowa, and was succeeded by the Rev. James Jeffers, also a student at Drew University.

The Rev. Mr. Jeffers, in announcing the decision of the official boards of the three churches, noted that "the boards have recognized the magnitude of ministry that is needed in our community and has taken a great step forward in moving into a fulltime pastorate."

Scranton Inks 1st Act

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton signed yesterday the first act of the 1963 legislature. It was a measure dealing with the printing of the legislative journal, daily record of the legislature's activities.

The act gives the legislature wider latitude in determining the technical details of the journal.

Blight-Resistant Zinnias

By George Abraham
ZINNIA AGAIN: For years even poor green thumbs could throw a few zinnia seeds in the ground and get enough plants for themselves and their neighbors. Today it's not simple.

Even the hardy zinnia has its own enemies, and the worst is a new disease, Alternaria blight. In a matter of a few days the plants turn brown and dry up, although some in the same beds remain perfectly normal. Sooner or later the healthy plants die off.

Is there anything which can be done to treat the soil this spring to prevent a recurrence of alternaria blight? No, there isn't. Soil treatments are ineffective.

Will spraying help? Not too much. As we've mentioned before, your best bet is to use blight-resistant types of zinnias.

One such is State Fair, coming in bright scarlet shades, yellow, lavender, pink, orange, rose and salmon colors. State Fair has more resistance to powdery mildew and the dreaded alternaria blight and is recommended for gardeners who've had bad luck growing zinnias.

State Fair Zinnia is not fool-proof, and it may be ravaged by these diseases in time, but to date it's the only hope we have.

PRUNING GRAPES: It's a lot easier to show a person how to prune grapes than it is to tell him how. If you're timid about pruning, remember this: More harm can be done by neglecting the vines than by hacking away on the canes.

Pruning controls cane growth so that the cane and fruit are in balance at all times. Don't be discouraged if your grapes are a whole mass of vines.

Stand in front of your canes, study them for a minute, then start operating. Select three or four of the best canes, and cut out all the rest.

Keep the canes of last year's growth which have buds at reasonably close intervals. Last year's growth is easy to find. It's light colored, smooth and live-looking. They may be anywhere from five to 10 ft. long, and about as thick as a lead pencil.

Buds near the center of a cane produce more than those at the base of the cane, or near the tip. So, roughly speaking, you can cut off the tips of the canes, leaving anywhere from eight to 12 buds. Cut out unnecessary old wood, as well as under vigorous canes of last year's growth.

When you've finished with your pruning job you'll have a lot of "brush" to haul away. That does not mean you've butchered your little vineyard. It's more apt to mean you'll have a good crop of grapes next fall!

HOME LANDSCAPING: Since more people see the front of your home, it's a good idea to put extra thought in planting it. A common mistake is to "hide" the foundation wall. This isn't necessary if the wall is attractive, and under three feet in height.

Don't feel you have to plant all the way across. There can be skips in the planting. In fact, spaces between shrubs are just as important as spaces between the words you're now reading. Avoid spray plants that soon grow up and become too tall or awkward in the foundation.

Let your house show through here and there. That means low growing shrubs under windows, taller plants at the corners of the building. Spreading plants in front of the taller types at the corners helps to soften the corners.

As for the door, choose, sometimes one plant on each side of the door is sufficient. If you have a squareish old two-story house, a smaller spreading plant in front of the upright plants help a lot. For older houses it's a good idea to vary the heights and varieties of shrubs.

A tall house needs spreading plants between the doorway and the corner to lower its apparent height. Low ranch type houses need few foundation plants.

Select slow growing plants to use near buildings and other restricted places. Even these will have to be pruned and maybe replaced once or twice in a lifetime.

WATER SOFTENERS: What effect does a water softener have on growing plants indoors? Some gardeners tell me it makes no difference; others say the water from a softener causes plants to wilt. I'm making a survey to get the answer first-hand.

Will homeowners who have water softeners please write and tell me what type they have and if they affect plant growth in any way? Thanks for your cooperation.

AFRICAN VIOLETS: What causes the buds to drop? Here are a few reasons: fumes from coal gases and manufactured gas (natural gas is o.k.); excess heat, low humidity, under-watering, overwatering when plant is too dry; overfeeding, drafts and lack of fresh air.

Ideal violet temperature is between 65-70 degrees with 40 to 50 per cent humidity. A common mistake is to overfeed violets. These plants shouldn't be fed unless they are growing well and need the extra nourishment.

By the way, take a peek under your violet leaves and see if you notice tiny scars. This means thrips, a tiny pest which rasps the foliage.

Control: dip the plant in a mild solution of soapy water and nicotine sulfate. Repeat at weekly intervals. By the way, from now on in, be on the lookout for yellowing shaped spots on the leaves, sometimes coming in fantastic patterns. This can be due to excess sun, especially after you've sprayed or watered the plants.

The remedy: Move the plant to a shadier spot.

What are some shrubs that will tolerate dry soil? Barberry, flowering quince, Smoke Bush, Juniper, Privet, Beauty Bush, Rosa rugosa, Snowberry, Coralberry and Honeysuckle are a few.

Some annuals for hot, dry soils include portulaca, alyssum, Calendula, Spider plant, and sometimes petunias. Perennials include Hibiscus, Daylilies, Artemisia, Gaillardia. These are real toughies for hot dry soils.

F. R. of Martinsville: "Please tell me how to prune currants and gooseberries. We have some of each and have never pruned them."

Most gardeners don't bother to trim these fruits and they still get a good crop. A general rule to follow is to cut out canes three or four years old. Also any low growing canes, or those which rub or cross should be cut out.

When you've finished the job, your bush might have six or seven one-year canes, three or four two-year canes, perhaps that many three-year canes, and probably a few four-year canes, if they look healthy.

Pruning gives you bigger and better fruit, and now's a good time to tackle the job.

R. E. of Reders: "When we dug our canna roots they were nice and big. Should they be divided before planting? Also should we start them in pots now?"

Cannas, like dahlias are divided in spring when they may be sectioned with a jackknife before planting. Make sure one "eye" (bud) is allowed for each division. As for starting them in pots, some gardeners do so for quicker bloom.

Most gardeners wait until after frost-danger has passed and then plant them directly in the ground. With good weather they'll bloom within a couple weeks after those which started indoors.

Dividends of $10 or more should be listed on the information return. Also include payments of interest, rents, royalties, annuities, pensions and other fixed or determinable income totaling $600 or more.

These returns should be filed on Forms 1066 and 1099, and should be addressed and mailed to any of the Internal Revenue Service Centers shown on Form 100.

Legal Bingo Is Opposed

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Pennsylvania Federated Legislative Committee voiced strong opposition yesterday to proposals legalizing bingo and allowing sale of liquor and beer on Sundays.

Both issues dominated the committee's biennial legislative field day here.

Delegates to the all-day conference also called for repeal of the pari-mutuel provisions of the 1959 harness racing law and pledged enthusiastic support to the federation's "No Gambling Crusade Committee of 1,000."

Bingo has been illegal in Pennsylvania for years. However, enforcement of the law has been left to local authorities.

Another highlight of the session was an address by Gov. Scranton at a noon luncheon.

The governor told his audience that the most important decision facing a law maker in deciding on legislation is: "Is it right?"

"Here's where the rub is," Scranton said. "It's the question that keeps people awake at nights. It is the most important question of all in deciding on legislation."

Other speakers included former Gov. Edward Martin and Lieutenant Gov. Raymond P. Shafer.

Penn Stater Roads Official

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton yesterday appointed Merrill A. Williamson of the Pennsylvania State University as a member of the Highway Professional Personnel Bureau.

The four-year appointment requires Senate confirmation.

Williamson, dean of the university's College of Engineering and Architecture, was named to replace James Cresce, president of the Drexel Institute of Technology, who resigned.

Question Box

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: F. F. of Stroudsburg: "We have a ranch type home with a 50-inch overhang from the roof. That means a certain area near the house gets little moisture, making it difficult for anything to grow there. Please tell us what can be planted in that strip."

Overhangs do present a problem because of the shade and lack of moisture beneath them. One way to handle them is to plant your shrubs outside the overhang area. This will leave considerable space behind the shrubs, but if you cover that blank area with a mulch of peat, cocoabean shells, or a gravel mulch it won't look too badly.

Quite often it's impossible to get anything to grow in the bone-dry area beneath an overhang, but there are plants which will tolerate it if you are willing to work peat into the soil and to keep the area watered from time to time.

Submit Bills On Aged Care

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five Republican senators reintroduced yesterday legislation, narrowly beaten last year, to provide medical care for the aged mostly through the Social Security system but also to help those not in the system.

The sponsors say it contains safeguards which President Kennedy's Social Security proposal last year did not include. However, the administration plan which Kennedy will send to Congress Thursday is said by Secretary of Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze to have been revised to make it more palatable to opponents.

Former Governor Calls On Scranton

HARRISBURG (AP) — Former Gov. Edward Martin, chief of state from 1943 to 1947, paid a courtesy call on Gov. Scranton Tuesday.

The two Republicans chatted for about 10 minutes, then left for the luncheon meeting of the Pennsylvania Federated Legislative Committee, a Scranton spokesman said.

Bond Sales $161,606 In Month

PENNSYLVANIANS purchased more U. S. Savings Bonds of the Series E and H issues in January than for any comparable month in the past.

Total purchases amounted to $46,754,886, a gain of 6.6 per cent over the same month a year ago.

Since May 1, 1957, Series E and H bonds have been the only types of Savings Bonds sold by the Treasury Department. Prior to that date, sales statistics included Series F, G, J and K securities.

In Monroe County, January sales amounted to $161,606. E. H. Wyckoff is county chairman.

According to Charles S. Krumrine, state chairman for the savings bonds organization, the Treasury ascribes part of January's sales increase in Pennsylvania and the nation, to delayed reporting of some sales actually made during the last week of December. Also, he said, the delayed effect of the Payroll Savings campaign of last autumn is beginning to show up strongly in E bond totals.

Scranton's Support Sought For Tough Mining Bill

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton must lend his active support to any effort to pass a more stringent anthracite strip mine bill this year if that effort is to be successful, a Democratic legislator said Tuesday.

Rep. Fred J. Shupnik, D-Luzerne, directed his comments to a 40-member delegation from the Plymouth area of the Wyoming Valley.

The citizens group came to Harrisburg to confer on pending strip mine legislation with Rep. W. G. Buchanan, R-Indiana, chairman of the House Mines and Minerals Committee.

The citizens said they were alarmed because Scranton made no mention of anthracite strip mine legislation in his first message to the General Assembly last Jan. 22.

They said they were most concerned about the possibility that no effort would be made this year to tighten the strip mine regulations in the anthracite region.

Shupnik noted that he and three Democratic colleagues introduced a bill which they said would provide for more stringent regulations in the anthracite area.

Shupnik said the fate of that or any anthracite mining bill rests in the hands of the governor.

"If he's going to back it, we can pass it," the legislator said. Buchanan told the group an anthracite strip mine bill would be released from his committee this year.

"The administration is working on a strip mine bill," he also said. "I want to see it first..." before commenting on its provisions.

Buchanan added that he could not give a timetable for legislative action at this time.

He was asked if it would come "later than spring?"

"I hope it's not that long," he replied. "But I just can't say."

The meeting was chaired by Rep. Frank P. Crossin, D-Luzerne.

He said he thought one comment made by Buchanan was especially significant to the meeting—that an anthracite bill would be released from his committee.

Crossin, Shupnik and Rep. Michael J. Needham, D-Lackawanna, commented on the bill they have introduced to the General Assembly.

The bill, essentially, would raise the minimum amount of bond to be posted by strip mine operators and also would provide for more stringent backfilling regulations, although not for complete backfill.

It was their consensus, however, that the bill would require the active support of Scranton to pass the General Assembly.

Scranton, at a recent press conference, said he thought the bill was "a step in the right direction," although he limited his comments to certain provisions and not all the specifics it contained.

Asian Flu Spread Faltering

A wave of influenza-like infection continues to spread slowly westward, but hope was expressed Tuesday it will soon begin to moderate with the approach of spring weather.

The U.S. Public Health Service's Communicable Disease Center (CDC) saw a favorable omen in the fact that only one state—Indiana—has been added to the most recently affected group.

The other states are West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio—the last three previously listed as invaded by the respiratory malady.

The Indiana report to the CDC listed outbreaks in Harrison County with 27 per cent absenteeism from school.

The CDC emphasized that of 13 states now reporting the flu-like illness, in only five and the District of Columbia has the Asian type been confirmed. These states are North Carolina, Maryland, New York, Illinois, and Kansas.

Respiratory disease of various sorts has appeared practically all over the country on the heels of severe winter conditions. Absenteeism has run into staggering totals with an undetermined number of deaths.

A CDC spokesman said if the flu-like disease continues its rather slow progress, there is hope its toll will not be too great before the milder weather of approaching spring.

Two Approved By Rites For Beatification

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton, American founder of the Sisters of Charity, and John N. Neumann, 19th century Philadelphia Roman Catholic bishop, were approved for beatification Tuesday.

The action by the Congregation of Rites is a major step on the road to sainthood.

Mother Seton could become the first American-born saint. St. Francis Xavier Cabrini, Mother Cabrini, the only U.S. citizen who has become a Roman Catholic saint, was born in Italy. She was canonized in 1946.

Mother Seton's beatification ceremony was set for March 17; Bishop Neumann's for two days later.

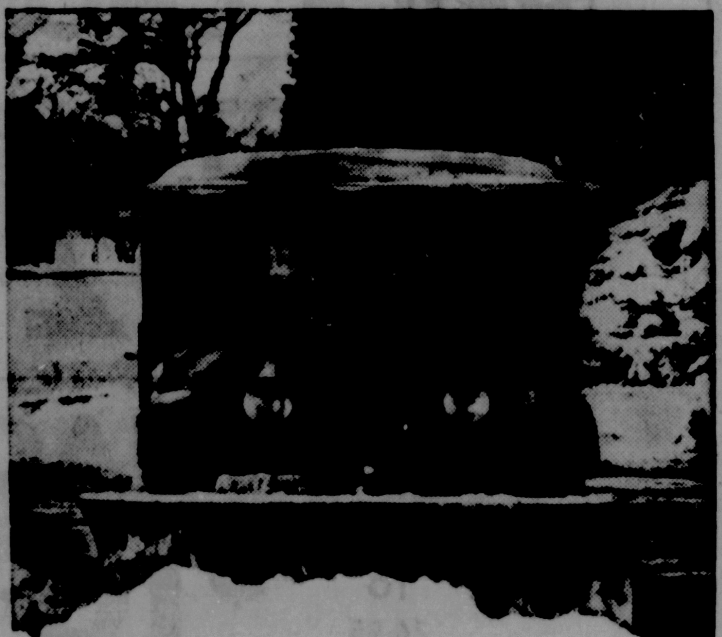

Meeting with Pope John XXIII in the papal throne room, the cardinals, prelates and theologians of the Congregation of Rites formally approved two miracles proposed for each beatification.

The last formal step remaining before beatification ceremonies in St. Peter's Basilica is publication of a papal decree announcing approval of the miracles.

After they are beatified, the two will merit the name "blessed." Mother Seton, a convert whose parents were Episcopalians, will be the first native American to receive the honor. Bishop Neumann, Philadelphia's fourth bishop, was born in Bohemia.

Two miraculous cures of ill or injured persons were attributed to the intervention of Mother Seton and Bishop Neumann. Two additional miracles must be approved for canonization or sainthood.

One miraculous cure attributed to Mother Seton's intervention was the recovery from a malignant growth in 1885 of Sister Gertrude Kormondorfer, a nun living in New Orleans. The other cure was that of Anne Theresa O'Neill, 4, of Baltimore, who recovered from acute leukemia in 1952.

Area Phone Numbers To Change

TELEPHONE numbers in Portland and Saylorsburg will change at 2:01 a.m., Sunday, March 3.

At that time, the present two-letter and five-digit numbers will change to seven-digit numbers.

Telephone users in Portland and Saylorsburg are requested to obtain the new numbers of friends and associates there before making calls, according to A. W. Ryder, Commonwealth Telephone Company District Manager. "All of the numbers are contained in the new directory," he added.

Seven Figures
After the March 3 change-over, calls to telephones in Portland and Saylorsburg, from within or outside the area, will require the use of seven figures instead of the present two-letter and five figures. A typical Portland number, TWInoaks 7-6667, will become 897-6667.

"It's important to get the right numbers in advance," said Ryder.

Eventually all the telephones throughout the United States will change to All-Number Calling or ANC.

Pre-Cana Conference Starts Feb. 26

THE eighth annual Pre-Cana Conference will begin throughout the Diocese of Scranton. Pre-Cana Conferences are a series of lectures offered to engaged couples and recently married couples on Christian Marriage.

The lectures will be conducted at St. Matthew's school beginning Tuesday, Feb. 26, 8 p.m.-9 p.m. Five of the lectures will be given by Rev. John A. Esseff, assistant pastor of St. Matthew's on the subjects of The Nature of Marriage, Material Preparation for the Marriage Ceremony, The Morals of Marriage, Psychological Differences in the Sexes, and the Economics of Marriage. A doc will give a lecture on the Physical and Medical Aspects of Marriage.

Couples who are engaged to be married and recently married couples are most welcome to attend. The lectures will be informal. The series of talks are free of charge.

The series begins on Feb. 26 and will be held each Tuesday evening until April 2.

State Order On Raw Sewage

HARRISBURG (AP)—The city of Scranton and 18 other communities were directed by the State Sanitary Water Board Wednesday to cease discharging raw sewage into the Lackawanna River and its tributaries.

Board Chairman Charles L. Wilbar Jr., issued the order as a culmination of hearings conducted by the agency in January.

Wilbar at the same time commended the affected municipalities for what he termed their demonstrated willingness to cooperate with the Lackawanna County Planning Commission in a study of sewerage needs.

He also noted that some of the municipalities in question have "engaged engineering firms to propose plans for solving their sewerage problems."

Wilbar said "it is likely that the municipalities could qualify for federal and state grants that will aid them in meeting some portions of the cost of planning and constructing their sewage treatment facilities."

Communities affected and the streams into which they discharge are: The cities of Scranton and Carbondale, Fell Twp., and the boroughs of Archbald, Blakely, Dickson City, Mayfield, Old Forge, Taylor, Vandling, Winton, Moosic, Olyphant and Throop, all in Lackawanna County and all discharging into the Lackawanna River; the borough of Dunmore, discharging into the Lackawanna River and Roaring Brook; borough of Duryea, discharging into the Lackawanna River and Mill Creek; the borough of Forest City, discharging into the Lackawanna River; the borough of Scranton, discharging into Mill Creek; and Clinton Twp., discharging into the Lackawanna.

State Auditor Killed In Crash

ELYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Edward Fleming Jr., 38, a state auditor of Mount Carmel was killed Tuesday near this Northumberland County community when his car skidded on wet, snow-covered Route 45 and struck a delivery truck.

Russell Kohler Jr., 31, driver of the truck, was taken to Shamokin State Hospital where he was reported in fair condition.

Fleming was trapped in his car by the steering post. The car caught fire but H. F. Ulrich, Columbia County coroner, said Fleming died of injuries before the fire broke out.

Fire Aides Nominated At Wind Gap

WIND GAP — Nomination for fire chiefs was held at a meeting of the Wind Gap Fire Co. last night in the fire hall.

Oscar Kibler was nominated for fire chief; Leroy Smith, first assistant fire chief, and Leonard Parsons, second assistant fire chief. Confirmation of the nominations were sent to the Borough Council.

Delbert Gum, president, reported on the new truck which the fire company is purchasing. Luther Rabenold reported on progress being made on the fund raising campaign that will be held at a later date.

Paul Shoemaker reported that compartments have been installed in the fire truck which the company is now using.

Oscar Kibler, fire chief, announced there was one fire during the month. The company answered a call Jan. 24 for a fire in a trailer owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. Peters.

Plans were discussed for the annual banquet and will be held either April 27 or May 4, at a place to be announced later. Banquet committee members are Floyd Kemmerer, Norman Simons, James Pontrelli, Russell Stewart, Anthony Eppolite and Wallace Hackman.

The annual picnic will be held July 19 and 20. Co-chairmen of the affair are Paul Altemose and Leonard Parsons.

Ralph Greensweig, ambulance foreman, reported 23 runs for the month making a total of 2,878 runs to date. Thirty-one new members were accepted bringing the total membership of the club to 1,299. The social committee for the March 18 meeting will be Delbert Gum, Sherwood Gum and Wallace Hackman.

$11 Million Bonds Finance Building

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP)—The sale of $11 million in bonds was announced by Pennsylvania State University today to finance construction of new student residence facilities on campus.

The bonds were underwritten by the First Boston Corp. at an interest rate of 3.41 per cent a year, reported Roger W. Rowland, New Castle manufacturer and president of the Penn State Board of Trustees.

Proceeds of the bond issue will be used to build additional residence halls for 1,100 students and dining and food service facilities for 21,100 students.

The new buildings, expected to be ready for use by next Fall, will bring the university's on-campus residence facilities to 12,000 students. An additional 2,200 live in fraternity houses, while the remainder of the student population commutes.

Food Prices Ease Downward

NEW YORK (AP)—Wholesale food prices continue to ease downward, this week hitting their lowest level since last June, Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., reported.

The firm listed the index at $5.83, representing the total price of one pound each of 31 foods in general use. That compares with $5.84 last week and $5.90 a year ago. The index has declined almost steadily since Dec. 4, when it was $6.02.

The index does not include fresh produce or fruit components, both of which have risen in recent weeks with severe weather.

JFKs Tax Proposals Are Scored

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three real estate spokesmen said yesterday that President Kennedy's tax revision proposals would put a crimp in the housing market, slow construction, and harm the economy.

They asked the House Ways and Means Committee to erase from the administration's $10-billion tax reduction-revision measure provisions that would put a new limit on personal income tax deductions and change depreciation and capital gains rules on real estate.

William A. Pollak, of Chicago, speaking for the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said the depreciation and capital gains proposals would cut deeply into construction "and the whole economy of the country would be affected."

He said new revenues that might be realized through those changes "would be a paltry sum" compared with losses that would follow a construction slowdown.

Henry J. Clay, counsel for the realty committee on taxation, said it would be folly to restrict construction—"a vital area of our economic productivity"—by enacting the depreciation rule changes.

Cause Of Fire Is Undetermined

YORK, Pa. (AP)—A $150,000 fire swept the three-story Foam Products Co. in Manchester Borough yesterday, throwing 45 employees out of work.

The blaze spread to the Manchester Community Hall, where damage was estimated by fire Chief Carl Heilman at another $10,000.

The cause of the fire was not determined.

Conducts Lottery

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP)—Eugene Dougherty, 67, of Plymouth, was free on $500 bail yesterday awaiting court action on charges of traffic in lottery. State police said they confiscated hundreds of lottery tickets yesterday in a raid on Dougherty's home.

Strip Mine Bills Flood Legislature

HARRISBURG (AP)—Conservation-minded legislators launched a new effort in the General Assembly yesterday to enact regulations to restore strip mines to full usefulness for other purposes.

Bills submitted in both houses would repeal the regulations enacted after a long battle in 1961 and impose a considerably more stringent base for restoring lands scarred by strip mines.

Identical bills pertaining only to bituminous coal fields were introduced in each house. In addition, a new Senate bill would apply the same basic regulations to both the bituminous and anthracite fields.

Proper Control
Sen. Robert Fleming, R-Allegheny, said the Senate bituminous bill (S176) "will once and for all properly control strip mining."

He added:

"It will be controversial, but it will be realized through those changes "would be a paltry sum" compared with losses that would follow a construction slowdown.

Henry J. Clay, counsel for the realty committee on taxation, said it would be folly to restrict construction—"a vital area of our economic productivity"—by enacting the depreciation rule changes.

Cause Of Fire Is Undetermined

YORK, Pa. (AP)—A $150,000 fire swept the three-story Foam Products Co. in Manchester Borough yesterday, throwing 45 employees out of work.

The blaze spread to the Manchester Community Hall, where damage was estimated by fire Chief Carl Heilman at another $10,000.

The cause of the fire was not determined.

Conducts Lottery

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP)—Eugene Dougherty, 67, of Plymouth, was free on $500 bail yesterday awaiting court action on charges of traffic in lottery. State police said they confiscated hundreds of lottery tickets yesterday in a raid on Dougherty's home.

Saylorsburg

INSTALLATION of newly elected elders and deacons of the Mount Eaton Lutheran Church was conducted by Rev. Robert Zuch at the Sunday morning service. Installed for terms of three years were: Mrs. Norman Trach, Mr. Fred Faustick and Mr. Raymond Koshler.

Mr. and Mrs. John Siegel recently observed their 58th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Anna Green, Philadelphia, is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph VanBulckick and mother, Mrs. Arnette VanBulckick.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shoemaker returned home on Wednesday after spending three weeks in Florida.

Members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Mount Eaton Church met at the home of Katie Jones on Wednesday and spent the day quilting. Present were Mrs. Selma Greenmeyer, Mrs. Florence Marsh, Mrs. Mary VanBulckick, Mrs. Pearl Altemose and Mrs. Sarah Koshler.

but will be in the best interests of conservation."

Sen. Robert Casey, D-Lackawanna, one of the sponsors of the bill applying to both regions (S178), said the bituminous bill wasn't sufficient.

"The open pits in northeastern Pennsylvania are much deeper and pose a greater hazard to public safety."

The only variance in the three bills is in the amount of bonds that would be required for failure to meet the regulations.

The bituminous bonds would be $600 an acre with a minimum present soft coal bonds of $400 and $4,000.

The anthracite bonds would be increased from $500 to $1,000 an acre with minimum bonds to be boosted from $5,000 to $10,000.

In another departure from the present law, land owners as well as the stripping operators would be required to post the bonds, in effect doubling the amount posted.

Sums Up Intent

Sen. Leonard C. Staisey, D-Allegheny, summed up the intent of the three bills this way:

The basic requirement is to return land to original contour. However, where this is not feasible or practical, the owner, stripper or secretary of mines reach agreement to return the land to its best determined and most productive use.

"It compels all parties to work together for this mutual interest to the Commonwealth."

Some of the new features would require licensing of all operators, subject to revocation for violations; provide for separate permits for each stripping operation; set a pre-determined plan of reclamation; establish a bureau of reclamation in the mines department; provide for reclamation nearly concurrent with stripping; fix final responsibility on mines department; make mine inspectors agents of the state sanitary water board, and require forfeited bond funds to be used on the specific bonded operation.

The plan involves exchanging one share of the Anaconda Co., of which Anaconda Aluminum is a wholly owned subsidiary, for each 3 1/4 shares of Amariite, a manufacturer of aluminum building and architectural materials.

Xerox Enters Revolving Credit

NEW YORK (AP)—Xerox Corp. has entered a new revolving credit agreement that increases the amount available to the firm from $25 million to $30 million.

The firm said the new agreement is with the group of nine banks in New York City, Rochester, N. Y., Boston and Pittsburgh, that provided the previous credit.

Xerox said the new plan eliminates heavy sinking fund payments during 1965 and 1966 which were required under the optional four-year term loan arrangement of the old plan.

Anaconda Set To Grab Firm

NEW YORK (AP)—Anaconda Aluminum Co. will acquire substantially all the assets and assume all liabilities of Amariite Corp., Atlanta, Ga., under a new agreement.

Checking Proxy Votes

By William A. Doyle

Q. Every year the company in which I own stock sends me a proxy statement requesting my signature so that my shares can be voted at the annual stockholders' meeting. Sometimes I have voted against proposals by the company's management.

How do I know my vote is really counted? How do I know that my vote isn't destroyed or changed to suit management? A. My, you are the suspicious type. But you do have a point. The truth of the matter is that you won't know, for sure, unless you go to a considerable amount of time, effort and expense.

At a stockholders' meeting (as at any election) there are election judges. They count the votes. Normally, they are named to handle that chore by the management of the company involved. There's always the outside possibility that in certain cases, they might do less than honest jobs.

However, I have attended hundreds (perhaps, thousands) of stockholders' meetings. I have never had any reason to believe that the counting of stockholders' votes was handled in a nifty other than an honest manner.

You must realize that "no" votes by stockholders seldom change the outcome of corporate balloting. Management usually wins, by a landslide.

However, when there is a "proxy fight" between opposing groups of stockholders, each vote can mean a great deal. And, in such a case, you can be sure that each side watches the counting of the balloting closely — to check against things such as you are concerned about.

I honestly believe that the counting of votes at a stockholders' meeting is handled in a much more honest manner than the elections I covered years ago, when I was a young reporter on a political beat.

Q. We have invested some money in shares of One William Street Fund. We invested $500 to begin and invest an additional $50 or more, whenever we want to. Does the agent through whom we made the first purchase get a commission every time we invest more money? Except for the first investment, we have done everything by mail.

A. You call him an "agent." Actually he is a "registered representative" of a broker-dealer firm.

It's impossible to say whether he, personally, gets a commission every time you invest more money in shares of that mutual fund. That depends on the policy of his firm. His firm does get a commission every time you buy more shares of the mutual fund.

In its commission setup, One William Street Fund is typical of most mutual funds. Each time you make an investment in shares of the fund, you pay a commission — 8 1/2 percent of the total purchase price. And seven percent goes to the broker-dealer. The other 1 1/2 percent goes to Lehman Brothers, which is the distributor of the fund's shares.

This is the way the sale of shares of most mutual funds are handled. There is a commission charge on each investment you make in shares of the fund, even though you may have no contact with the broker-dealer or its registered representative after the first purchase.

And you can't get around the commission charge by dealing directly with the fund. It's the law (the Investment Company Act of 1940) that, when a mutual fund has commission charges (as most do), that charge must be made.

Most broker-dealers do pay their registered representatives a share of each commission that comes in. And the smart "registered rep" keeps in contact with his customers.

Glenn Tells Educators He Has Flight Memories

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Lt. Col. John H. Glenn, America's first earth-orbiting astronaut, said Tuesday night he still has "many very vivid memories" of his historic flight a year ago Wednesday.

Glenn mentioned other U.S. space feats of the past year and said, "It is really hard to believe that all this has happened in only 12 months."

Asked by reporters if he would do it again, he said emphatically, and with a face-cracking grin, "Absolutely!"

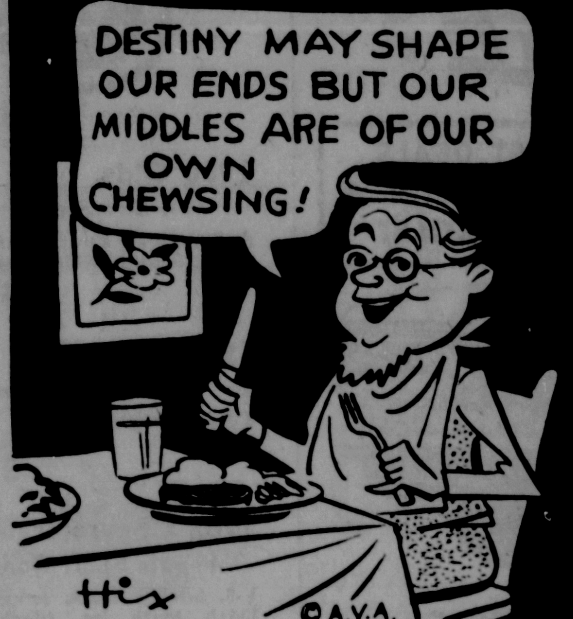

Glenn came to Atlantic City to address the 56th annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators.

Last year he brought convention sessions to a halt as numbers of the 24,000 educators around television sets to watch the drama of Cape Canaveral. "I've been told I'm the only one in the country who missed the whole thing on television," Glenn said Tuesday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Safety Council yesterday honored Albert H. Schuch of Clifton Heights, Pa., with its highest award for saving the life of a Baltimore, Md., man last Aug. 30 through artificial respiration. Schuch, a mechanic for the Philadelphia Electric Co., received the award at the utility's annual Safety Awards Dinner.

Dickson City Miner Killed

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — John Mishko, 46, a Dickson City miner, was killed yesterday when a massive anthracite coal conveyor being repaired by a crew collapsed without warning and plunged 150 feet to the ground.

Six others escaped although two men were trapped in the tons of twisted wreckage and had to be cut free by acetylene torches.

The mishap occurred at the mouth of the Glen Alden Corporation's Marvone Colliery.

The work crew was repairing a leak in the conveyor line when it toppled over.

Mishko died of a skull fracture, said a company doctor. He was pronounced dead at Taylor Hospital here.

William White, 40, of Justus, was trapped in the wreckage and was saved only when rescuers heard his moans. He was taken to the hospital with a possible shoulder fracture, leg injuries and shock.
